National interest priority questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — A conservative Republican senator today questioned whether Vice President-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller will be able to put the national interest ahead of what he termed "a dynasty of wealth and power unequalled in the history of the United States."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., raised the question before the Senate Rules and Administration Committee, which is holding hearings on the nomination. However, he did not ask the committee to reject President Ford's selection of the former New York governor.

Helms said that proposals to put Rockefeller's vast holdings into a blind trust don't really get to the heart of the issue.

"If the nominee is ever faced with the problem of survival of ingrained dynastic values as against the survival of the national interest," Helms asked, "is there any human being on earth who can be sure what will survive?"

Helms said Congress must ask itself "whether we want the highest political offices of the land to be identified with one of the highest concentrations of private power in the land."

Helms said he asked to testify after reading press accounts that the panel had failed to probe deeply enough into Rockefeller's background and presented the committee with a long list of questions for Rockefeller about various activities dealing with his financial holdings, support of abortion reform proposals and wiretapping in the Nixon administration.

Rockefeller completed his testimony before the committee on Wednesday and the panel began hearing from other witneses today, most of them opponents to the nomination.

Committee Chairman Howard W. Cannon, D-Nev., hoped to hear from all 15 public witnesses today and then suspend the confirmation hearings pending receipt of an audit of Rockefeller's taxes.

The witnesses included black activist Angela Davis, appearing as cochairperson of the National Alliance Against Racist and Political Repression; leaders of the strongly conservative Young Americans for Freedom and Liberty Lobby; and persons on both sides of the controversy over abortion reform.

Although Cannon said it would be premature to predict the panel's action before it gets the audit and hears the public witnesses, Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., said "I don't see any doubt the committee will recommend his nomination."

Cannon hopes the Rules Committee can get the nomination to the Senate floor in time for action before Oct. 11, set officially on Wednesday as the start of a congressional recess for the November elections.

However, Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., of the House Judiciary Committee, said an audit of Rockefeller's taxes by the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation won't be ready before the third week in October.

That would mean the Senate, as well as the House, would have to delay its action on Rockefeller until after the November elections.

Rockefeller wound up his 2½ days of testimony Wednesday morning, and the committee spent the afternoon hearing a parade of congressmen and senators praise the former New York governor.

Kennedy children are guarded against kidnap

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secret Service agents guarded the children of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for more than a week because of a kidnap threat, a Treasury Department official said today.

The threat was so serious that White House counsel Philip Buchen gave his personal approval for the protection and was kept personally advised of developments, the official said.

A source close to the investigation in Boston said the threats were made against "all children of Kennedy blood." Treasury Undersecretary Edward C. Schmults said a child of Kennedy-in-law actor Peter Lawford was also afforded protection for a short time.

Schmults said the kidnap threat was first received Sept. 13. Secret Service and police protection was provided mainly to Kennedy children in the Boston area, then phased out over the next week, Schmults said.

He said he could not provided details of the exact nature of the threat, whether it was received in the mail or by phone.

An FBI spokesman in Washington would say only, "We have received an unspecified threat on a member of the Kennedy family. We are investigating."

A source in Boston told The Associated Press that the Secret Service and FBI may be close to cracking the case.

The source said several persons may be involved and said news of the threats was withheld from the public to give agents a better chance to protect the children.

Sen. Kennedy has three children, Kara Anne, 14, Edward M. Kennedy Jr., who is 13 today, and Patrick Joseph, 7.

The only Kennedy child normally receiving Secret Service protection is John F. Kennedy Jr., son of the late president. His sister, Caroline, is no longer protected by the Secret Service because she is over 16.

By law, the Secret Service provides protection for the children of former presidents until they reach age 16. There is no legal provision for protecting members of any other prominent families, except for presidents and presidential candidates.

Another Treasury Department source indicated that children of the late President John F. Kennedy were not considered to be the object of the threat, mainly because they were not in the Boston area at the time.

Besides Buchen, Treasury Secretary William E. Simon also approved the protection of the Kennedy children, Schmults said.

Says Ford supports measure suspending aid for Turkey

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott said today President Ford will support an amendment under which military aid to Turkey could be suspended.

The amendment, approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee Wednesday, is a modified version of an aid cutoff voted by the House on Tuesday.

Scott talked with newsmen after he and Majority Leader Mike Mansfield returned to the Capitol from a breakfast meeting with Ford. Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee also attended.

Scott said the President will support a money bill amendment which provides for suspension of military aid to Turkey unless and until the President certifies that Turkey "is making good faith efforts to reach a negotiated settlement" between Greece, Turkey and Cyprus.

The White House meeting came as pressure built in Congress to cut off military assistance to Turkey.

Turkey at the same time said its army could hold its own without American help.

Defense Minister Hasan Isik said that "even if nobody gives us aid, we are determined to continue in the direction we see as right" on the Cyprus question.

Isik said Turkish forces strengthen the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and added, "If Turkey cannot use arms received within the framework of the alliance, even for a just cause, this nation could question the usefulness of the armed might provided by the alliance."

The Senate, meanwhile, set aside the pending foreign aid authorization bill, reportedly at the request of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Kissinger was said to fear that mounting congressional sentiment for restrictions on foreign aid programs would interfere with efforts to negotiate settlements in tense situations throughout the world.

Senate leaders scheduled action for Monday on a continuing resolution authorizing spending beyond Sept. 30 at last year's rate for foreign aid and other federal programs for which regular annual appropriation bills have not yet been passed by Congress.

The House added on Tuesday to the continuing resolution an amendment, also opposed by Kissinger, to ban any further military aid to Turkey until President Ford certifies that "substantial progress" has been made toward a peace agreement in Cyprus.

The Senate Appropriations Committee on Wednesday recommended modification of the House-passed language to suspend aid until the President certifies that Turkey "is making good faith efforts to reach a negotiated settlement."

The modification, proposed by Sen. Edward W. Brooke, R-Mass., was intended to encourage Turkey to seek an agreement with Greece and Cyprus for withdrawal of troops now occupying a third of the island.

County firefighter relieved of duties

Pettis County firefighter Dave Fischer, 20, 821 West Tenth, has been relieved of his duties with the department and is now seeking a public hearing on the matter.

County Court Presiding Judge Harry Walch said Fischer was "let go" because his employment with the county fire department was for the summer vacation period only, and is no longer needed.

Fischer, who said he is a student at State Fair Community College, said he was led to believe he would fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Robert Paxton in July.

Fischer met with the county court and county fire chief Ronnie Ollison Thursday morning and said in the summer Ollison informed him he could work in Paxton's place, "nothing was said about a replacement." Ollison denied this.

Last week the county court hired John Swope, 612 East 11th, to fill the slot left by Walch told Fischer he was never hired, he was allowed to work merely as a summer replacement. Walch told Fischer none of the department's five employes are on a permanent basis, including Ollison.

"It looks like I was fired anyway," Fischer said.

"I think they were pretty good to you to let you work this long," Ollison said to Fischer.

Ollison said, in a written statement to the county court, that after Paxton left Fischer was allowed to remain, "because we couldn't find anybody at the time."

The county fire chief went on to say that every time an alarm was received, "he would go all to pieces . . . which endangers the lives of the men he works with and the lives of the people of Pettis County."

Ollison also charged Fischer tried, "to

Calley still being held

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — "I don't have a battalion to storm Ft. Leavenworth and take him out," one of William L. Calley Jr.'s attorneys said about the Army's efforts to stay a federal judge's order freeing Calley.

"It's unbelievable to me that the Army would just out and out say they're not going to release the man," said J. Houston Gordon, the 28-year-old Tennessee lawyer who has been the driving force behind Calley's fight for freedom.

"The judge's order is to release the man forthwith, and I understood that meant immediately."

Calley, 31, remains in disciplinary barracks at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan., today while the Army moves to appeal U.S. District Court Judge J. Robert Elliott's decision overturning Calley's murder conviction in the My Lai massacre of Vietnamese civilians.

The Army has said it also will recommend that the Justice Department, which acts for it in cases before federal civil courts, move for a stay of Elliott's order to release Calley.

The former Army lieutenant "will not be released from confinement pending a decision on these recommendations," the Army's announcement said.

Elliott ordered Calley released once before, on bond last February, but that order was revoked by a higher court when the Army filed an appeal.

Gordon said Calley learned of Judge Elliott's ruling by radio.

"He heard it with a great deal of pleasure," the lawyer said. "I think he is pleased that finally during this entire ordeal, there has been something positive for him."

Calley reacted "in a calm, cool and collected manner," Gordon said.

Calley hopes to be released from Ft. Leavenworth "in a few hours, and not a matter of days," Gordon said.

Kenneth Henson of Columbus, another of Calley's attorneys, said:

"It's incongruous that you release draft dodgers and deserters and expedite their release and continue to imprison a man whom a U.S. judge said had his constitutional rights violated in his trial and conviction.

If an appeal is made, it will probably be taken to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

Calley was convicted 3½ years ago of murdering at least 22 My Lai villagers. He originally was sentenced to life imprisonment, but that sentence was later reduced to 10 years.

Gordon said that if Elliott's decision to free Calley is overruled by the appeals court, he will take it to the Supreme Court.

Elliott spent three months reviewing more than 50 volumes of transcript of Calley's courtmartial, one of the longest in U.S. military history. He also watched hundreds of television tapes, and read newspaper stories, books and magazine accounts of the My Lai case.

Kissinger is rejected

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Greece has ruled out Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger as a mediator in its deadlock with Turkey over the future of Cyprus.

"I don't see the role of Henry Kissinger as a mediator trusted by us and trusted by the Turks," Greek Foreign Minister George Mavros told a news conference on Wednesday.

Mavros said he could understand Kissinger's interest in the Cyprus situation because of its danger to world peace.

He said, "Any interest is well accepted, but not as an official mediator."

Kissinger in July tried without success by telephone and through Undersecretary of State Joseph J. Sisco to avert the confrontation between Greece and Turkey. Recently he appeared to be moving gradually into a new major peacemaking effort on the order of his shuttle diplomacy between the Arabs and Israelis last winter.

After a cordial meeting with Mavros on Tuesday, Kissinger hinted to a newsmen he might stop in Cyprus during his trip to the Middle East next month.

"The United States is prepared to do what is useful to bring about a fair and workable solution, including possibly my direct involvement," he said.

Kissinger also talked on Tuesday with Turkish Foreign Minister Turan Gunes and scheduled additional meetings with both Gunes and Mavros after his return to New York Sunday night. But neither the Greeks nor Turks have ever asked Kissinger publicly to intervene.

Greek hostility toward the United States erupted during the Turkish invasion because Kissinger failed to prevent the invasion and then failed to check the Turkish advance. There were anti-American demonstrations in Athens and other Greek cities, with chants and placards denouncing "Killer Kissinger."

Although both Mavros and Gunes are in New York for the United Nations General Assembly, they refuse to see each other, diplomats said. The diplomats disclosed, however, that the two governments have maintained contact through West Germany, one of the few European countries continuing to have equally good relations with both Ankara and Athens.

Justice is blind but seems inconsistent

By RICHARD STARNES

WASHINGTON — A year-long experiment carried out by 50 federal judges has revealed tremendous disparity in sentences meted out by different judges in identical criminal cases.

The marked difference in sentencing "evidences a clear need for reform," Chief Judge Irving R. Kaufman of the Second Circuit Court of Appeals said. The sentencing experiment was initiated by Judge Kaufman and carried out in the second circuit.

Previous attempts to document suspected disparity in sentencing have proved indecisive because no two defendants are identical, nor are the circumstances of any two crimes identical in all particulars. In the second circuit experiment, however, judges handed down hypothetical sentences in each of 30 identical cases.

Although each of the 30 cases was an actual case involving a real defendant, each case was disguised in one or more details so judges involved in the experiment would not be influenced by the actual sentence handed down by the judge who originally heard the case.

The experiment revealed "glaring disparity" in sentencing, Judge Kaufman said. He added that "a system in which the length of an offender's sentence is determined by the random factor of assignment to a particular judge does not advance the ends of justice."

The experiment, supervised by the Federal Judicial Center, analyzed 1,442 sentences. It found wide variation in fines, prison sentences and probation meted out by different judges for the same offense.

In one case a union official convicted on nine counts of loansharking and income tax evasion — a man with three prior convictions, and six other arrests — received sentences ranging from a high of 20 years' imprisonment and a $65,000 fine to a low of three years in prison and no fine. The median sentence was 10 years and $50,000. Other judges handed down sentences ranging from 15 years and $50,000 to five years' imprisonment in the same case.

In another case, a 26-year-old man with no prior record received sentences ranging from seven-and-a-half years in prison to four years' probation for conviction on two counts of theft from interstate shipment. In his case the median sentence was three years' imprisonment.

A heroin addict with a record of two previous convictions pleaded guilty to possession of barbiturates and received sentences ranging from five years' imprisonment to two years' probation.

Another defendant who pleaded guilty to illegal entry into the United States drew sentences ranging from three years' imprisonment to two years' unsupervised probation. One judge agreed to suspend any sentence if the man left the country.

Results of the sentencing experiment are being weighed by a 16-member committee of jurists. Among possible solutions to the problem of sentencing disparity is establishment of procedure to permit changes in sentence by appeals courts.

Another possibility being explored is to permit defense attorneys to bargain with sentencing judges over the punishment to be meted out to their clients. This would permit lawyers to cite typical sentences imposed for similar offenses in other courts and presumably would have the effect of smoothing out inequities in sentencing. (NEA)

Repeats allegations

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — An Illinois contractor has repeated his earlier statements that roadbuilders decided among themselves who would submit low bids on a group of highway construction jobs in June 1971.

Roadbuilder Edwin Pautler of Chester, who was granted immunity from prosecution in the case, refused under cross-examination by defense lawyers to change his testimony in the federal bid-rigging trial of two contractors and three highway construction firms.

Pautler repeated that a meeting was held in a suite in Springfield's St. Nicholas Hotel the night before the June 4, 1971, bid letting in which contractors decided which groups would submit the low bids.

Pautler denied the contention of defense lawyer Edward L. Foote of Chicago that Pautler had gone to the suite in the St. Nicholas only to ask for a share of the state contracts and was thrown out by other contractors. Foote represents Carbondale roadbuilder E.T. Simons, one of those who rented the suite.

Pautler said that incident took place, but he returned to the suite later and the deal to fix the bids was made.

Pautler first testified about the meeting Tuesday. He said he attended it with another contractor, Frank Nutty of Vienna.

On trial with Simons are the E.T. Simons Construction Co., the J.D. Barter Co. of Harrisburg and its president, H.H. Barter, and Superior Structures Inc. of Marion.

Recreation director disappointed

City recreation director Roscoe Righter expressed disappointment this week over the poor turnout for various programs offered this fall by the park department.

Righter said the department has increased its recreational offerings this year to 30, compared to 12 last year. "We've got openings for everyone, we just need people to fill up the classes," he said.

Lack of interest seems especially evident, Righter said, in such offerings as decoupage, ceramics and knitting. He said no one turned out for the first night of swimming for the handicapped and that there were also openings for older girls in tumbling and gymnastics, as well as in other sports areas.

"We've had a lot of comments about how good it is to have a city recreation department," said Righter, "yet the people don't back it."

The good old days of driving may be back

Via scenic backroads, Americans are rediscovering the pleasures of driving

By DON OAKLEY

THE AMERICAN MOTORIST owes a deep debt of thanks to the oil sheiks. Except for a few bad moments at the height of the oil embargo last winter, they've made driving a pleasure again. The paltry extra millions going into the coffers of the petroleum companies is a small price to pay for this unforeseen happy consequence of the 1973 Mideast war.

What has happened is that the gasoline shortage — or more exactly, the resultant 55-m.p.h. speed limit — has made the nation's forgotten side roads an attractive and practical alternative to the increasingly congested and harrowing superhighways.

This writer and family made this discovery (which others no doubt have made but are keeping secret) during a recent vacation trip to the South. Nearly every summer for the past ten years we have driven from Cleveland to visit relatives in Texas. Each year we saw longer and longer portions of the Interstate System completed until, finally, the entire route was by freeway.

What a boon this was, we thought. No more traffic lights, no more little towns to crawl through, all the big cities bypassed. Now we could make Dallas in two days instead of the previous three!

Thus it was with great trepidation, but with a certain sense of adventure, that we left the security (?) of the freeway and actually drove through the city . . .

BUT THEN WE began noticing something. Freeway traveling was becoming more and more of a rat race, especially in and around large cities like Cincinnati, where I-71 from Cleveland and Columbus joins I-75 from Detroit and Toledo and I-74 from Indianapolis to form a concrete Mississippi leading into the South. Last year we found ourselves caught in jam after jam, not only in Cincinnati but all through Kentucky, some caused by accidents, some by toll stops but others for no apparent reason.

This year was even worse. It had always been a nerve-wracking game with the big trucks — watching in the mirror as a giant rig crawled up your rear bumper while going down a hill to wheel around you at the last minute, then zooming past him on the upgrade, only to have him overtake you again on the other side. The lowered speed limit — which no trucker is going to obey going downhill, even if he obeys it elsewhere — now put a real edge on the game. Long before we reached Cincinnati, I was longing for a more soothing pastime — like trapping Bengal tigers.

But I persisted, hoping things would improve in Kentucky. They didn't. Exhausted, we pulled into a rest area north of Louisville. "Let me see the map," I said to my wife, "We've got to get off this road or you're going to witness a man going crackers." My wife, who actively drives even when she isn't behind the wheel, knew what I meant.

"LOOK," I SAID, "Instead of taking I-65 all the way down to Nashville and picking up I-40 to go west to Memphis, who don't we get on Route 68 at Bowling Green and then 79 at Russellville and follow that through Tennessee? That's the way we used to go, remember? Even if traffic is heavy we'll be saving a lot of miles by taking the hypotenuse of the triangle. If it gets too bad, we can always cut down to I-40 before we get to Memphis. But it can't be any worse than this."

Thus it was with great trepidation, but with a certain sense of adventure, that we left the security(?) of the freeway and actually drove through the city of Bowling Green to pick up U.S. 68.

The experience was a revelation.

Except for the bigger towns, which were no real problem, we literally had the road to ourselves. The highway was excellent and in many places, four lanes. The billboardless scenery (bless you, Lady Bird) was beautiful. I set the automatic throttle at 55 (well, maybe 58), something I had been less and less able to do on the crowded freeways, and relaxed. We saw an occasional car and one truck the rest of that day — a truck on our road!

It was like revisiting our past. Someone was always coming up with a comment like: "I remember this town. Didn't we eat at that restaurant? Say, isn't that the motel we stayed at one time?"

THE NEXT DAY was the same. We forged on, still scarcely able to believe it all. Memphis approached. "Know something," I announced, "I'm not going to take the bypass — I'm going straight through!"

Memphis, early on a Sunday morning, was a delight. Hardly any traffic at that hour, the stoplights well synchronized. We were through the city and into Arkansas before we could have been halfway around it on the bypass.

Diagonally through Arkansas, Texarkana-bound, we followed Route 70, paralleling I-40. We caught glimpses of the freeway. Traffic on it appeared to be light. We could have entered it any number of times, but why bother? We were making equally good time and this road was much more interesting. We even encountered an old-fashioned gasoline price war somewhere in Arkansas. (Unfortunately, I had filled the tank just before.)

We had forgotten the lovely wooded countryside around Malvern and saw more motels we recognized. (George Washington had nothing on us.) And we toured Arkadelphia, where in December, 1964, I had been caught in one of the South's worst snowstorms ever.

SO IT WENT the rest of the way. We really looked forward to the trip back. To avoid

It was like revisiting our past. Someone was always coming up with a comment like: "I remember this town. Didn't we eat at that restaurant?"

Kentucky and Cincinnati, I mapped out a route through Illinois and Indiana. We found that the nonfreeway way was not always the best. Crossing Indiana, for instance, we tried heavily built-up U.S. Route 40 and abandoned it for I-70, which paralleled it. But for the most part, it was only with reluctance that I took a freeway when no alternative was available.

"So if you write about it," said my wife as we neared home, "and the newspapers print it and millions of people start taking the old roads again, won't that spoil it all? It'll be just like it was before."

"They won't," I said, flattered at her estimate of my readership. "After all, nobody goes 55 — well, maybe 58. These roads aren't built for much more than that. And you do have to slow down once in a while for a town. But even if people do, the trucks will never leave the freeways."

What an idea, I mused. Let the trucks have the freeways and let the old highways and byways belong to the people again. Think of the economic shot in the arm that would give to all the little towns and gas stations and restaurants and motels that have been bypassed by "progress."

But imagine — long-distance driving a pleasure again! Who would have thought? (NEA)

Dumplings over stewed apples

Old-time favorite updated

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

When old-time cooks made a favorite dessert by stewing sliced apples and dropping dumpling batter over them, they called the result Apple Slump. No wonder. When we tried one of those old-fashioned recipes, the dumplings really did slump! Not so with our updated version of the dessert. The dumplings stay lofty.

In deference to the recipe's early origin, we've named our version after Johnny Appleseed, the legendary character who so long ago planted apple seeds over the wide territory that is now Ohio and Indiana. His real name was John Chapman and he was born just 200 years ago — on Sept. 26, 1774.

Johnny Appleseed Dumpling Dessert . . .
. . .in honor of the bicentennial of an American folk hero.

JOHNNY APPLESEED DUMPLING DESSERT

- 2¼ pounds (about) McIntosh or green cooking apples
- ¾ cup sugar
- 1 cup water
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 1 cup buttermilk biscuit mix
- 1-3rd cup milk
- 1 tablespoon sugar mixed with ¼ teaspoon cinnamon

Pare, core and thinly slice apples — there should be about 2 quarts. In a 12-inch skillet or large wide saucepot, stir together the apples, sugar, water and lemon juice. In a small mixing bowl stir together the biscuit mix and milk until dry ingredients are moistened. Heat apple mixture to boiling; drop dumpling mixture, in 6 portions, over apples; simmer, uncovered for 10 minutes. Sprinkle dumplings with sugar-cinnamon mixture; cover and simmer until apples are tender and dumplings are cooked through — 10 minutes longer. Serve at once "as is" or with pour cream. Makes 6 servings. This combination gives lots of apple in proportion to dumpling; if you prefer more dumpling, double the amount of biscuit mix and milk and drop in 12 portions over the boiling-hot apple mixture.

Increase in family budget predicted

CHICAGO (AP) — Salaries up by 177 per cent — sound impossible?

No, not if you look into the crystal ball at the year 2000.

"And that is good news for the family budget custodian," says a recent report. Offering a glimpse of how 21st-century families will be living, the report from the financial services arm of Esmark predicts that income for a husband and wife with two school age children will average $38,041 — compared to today's $13,721.

Homemakers will delight in the fact that food costs will be down.

"Approximately 23.6 per cent of gross income will be spent on filling the family larder, as opposed to 25.3 per cent today. Modern, automated food processing technologies will help bring food prices down.

"Shelter will go up slightly compared to 1974. Americans today spend roughly 24.5 per cent of their income for housing — 25 per cent will be spent in 2000."

The forecast is for more of the family dollar going into savings, insurance and investments 25 years hence — 8 per cent. The probability of longer life for the average American will automatically trigger the need for meaningful retirement programs.

R and R — rest and recreation — will figure prominently in the 21st-century budget.

Let there be peace at drive-in movies

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the impoliteness of people at drive-in movies. Some are constantly honking their car horns and making other noises while the picture is on. Also kids sit on roofs of cars and block the view of those behind them. If people would only be more considerate of those around them everyone would be happy and enjoy the movies more. — B.J.

DEAR POLLY — A friend of mine was telling me how her mother cured her of leaving her dresser drawers open. It sounds a bit rash but I thought it pretty humorous. Whenever her mother found a drawer open she simply dumped its contents on the bed. Once when the habit seemed beyond hope she actually emptied a drawer in the front yard. Needless to say after a few times of cleaning up the mess the habit was broken. — NESSA.

DEAR POLLY — If you have trouble stitching through material to the dress you are wearing when hand sewing or mending and frequently have to rip out stitches reach for a slick covered magazine when you sit down to sew. Place this under your sewing. There will be no more ripping out and your seam and sewing will be straighter and more even. — LENA.

DEAR POLLY — Occasionally I have small visitors who need a booster seat to eat comfortabley at the table. When our new telephone books were delivered I stacked the two old ones and covered them with a good-grained design adhesive-backed paper. The resulting booster seat is over three inches tall, matches my maple chairs, is easy to wipe off, does not scar the chairs, is relatively easy to sit on and cost little. — MRS. J.A.S.

DEAR POLLY — Do tell Penny who has fleas in her shag carpet that we have a dog and a cat. At one time we had fleas in our carpet so scattered flea powder over the carpet and left it there for several days and then I vacuumed it up and the fleas were completely gone. The flea powder did not harm our carpet but Penny could test an inconspicuous spot first to be sure. — BILLIE.

DEAR POLLY — To our sorrow our big Shepherd dog was let into the house before he was de-fleaed. I can tell Penny how to get rid of the fleas in her shag carpet. Set a dish filled with soapy water in the middle of the rug and then put a light over it such as a desk lamp or even a flashlight. The rest of the room should be completely dark. The fleas will be attracted to the light and jump right into the solution and drown.

I also turned the closet light on in my bedroom, closed the door just so a slit of light showed and placed the dish of soapy water at the crack. I caught dozens of fleas this way. — D.B.

GIRLS: Families with small children should not use the flea powder treatment suggested by Billie. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — Years ago a doctor told me to apply ice or immerse a burned hand, for example, in extremely cold water for at least half an hour. Oh, how good it feels but while hurriedly cooking a meal who can take the time? It seems I manage to get all my minor little burns in spurts. Recently I took hold of a hot spoon. To relieve the pain I grabbed a small can of fruit juice from the freezer and just held it while I continued cooking. A few days later while mashing potatoes some of the hog mixture splashed on the back of my hand and I grabbed a bag of frozen vegetables and sort of wrapped it around my hand. The pain was soon gone and not a sign of a burn. If more time is needed just keep the package on the burn until you have finished your meal. — BERTAH.

Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — My problem is with a sweating toilet tank that often leaves a puddle of water and at times an odor. Surely some reader has had the same problem and can help me solve mine. — MARIE.

Plant unable to expand work force

The drastic decline in demand by a Kansas City market for powdered metal parts produced by the local Alpha-Sintered Metals Inc. plant has prevented the firm from expanding its work force to two 15-person shifts, plant manager Norman Bankovich said Thursday.

"As everyone knows, the economy has been down and the demand at our Kansas City market, which we originally intended to be a major part of our business, is correspondingly down," Bankovich said. He declined to identify the market.

When the plant, located on East Boonville Road, began operation in February, Bankovich indicated a total of 30 employes would be trained. Currently, he said, the employes at the plant include himself, four production workers, one supervisor and one secretary.

A partial 2-person second shift is expected to be added soon, Bankovich said, because "even with the decrease in demand, we still have to make more of certain parts."

In an effort to secure additional customers, Bankovich said, "we're going to go into Chicago and Texas." Officials of the company, whose home office is in Ridgway, Pa., originally did not plan for parts manufactured by the local plant to be sold east of the Mississippi River. "But," Bankovich explained, "We've got to compensate for the Kansas City slack some way."

The firm manufactures parts by compressing recycled metal powders into precision molds which are then sintered in a controlled furnace at a temperature below the melting point of the primary metal used. The powder particles are bonded together by atomic transfer.

Because of the time required to produce new molds for the new market demands, it will be two to three months before it is possible to manufacture parts. Additional employes will be hired at that time, Bankovich indicated.

A $150,000 industrial obligation bond issue to fund the plant was approved in February, 1973, after having been earlier defeated in November, 1972.

Sharp drop in August economy index

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government indicator designed to foreshadow future trends in the economy suffered its sharpest drop of the year in August, the Commerce Department reported today.

Most of the drop was attributed to sagging stock prices, but the index of leading indicators also was pushed down by the largest number of new unemployment claims for any month since March.

The Commerce Department said the over-all index dropped by 1.2 per cent on the basis of figures available for 8 of the 12 components involved. The downturn, the second so far this year, reversed a 1.9 per cent jump in July and was the largest drop since a 1.7 per cent decline in December. This left the index 5.7 per cent ahead of where it was a year ago.

In reality, the decline probably was more severe than it appeared, because the index does not take account of inflation. Four of the components in the index track the prices of vital goods, so that inflation would drive the components up automatically, even without any gain in the actual volume of goods involved.

New claims for unemployment insurance totaled 315,000 last month, a 10.5 per cent increase over the previous month. Stock prices were off 10.3 per cent by the Commerce calculations.

Also pointing to slower economic activity were a falloff in the number of building permits issued, lower prices for industrial materials and reduced orders for factory expansion and equipment.

Ford announces two appointments

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford announced today he is nominating David K.E. Bruce to be U.S. ambassador to NATO and Gen. Fred C. Weyand to be the Army's chief of staff.

Bruce, former envoy to Britain, West Germany and France, has served as chief of the American Liaison Office in Peking since May 1, 1973.

White House press secretary Ron Nessen said the Bruce nomination "demonstrates our commitment to the continuation and strengthening of ties" with Europe and NATO.

run the department ever since he has been there."

Fischer said he was merely making suggestions to Ollison.

Western District Judge John Blum said he had known Fischer for some time and knew he was interested in fire work. Bluhm and Walch said Fischer never came to them and requested the job. The job was suggested to him because someone was needed for the summer vacation period, they said.

Walch said Fischer was going to use the money from the job to pay for his education. Thursday morning Fischer said he intended to go to Oklahoma State University and study fire training in order to become a state fire marshall. He told the court that after going there he discovered he would not be able to afford living there, and returned to Sedalia.

Fischer said he is now without a job, has no money and recently bought a new car.

Ollison said Fischer was paid $1.90 an hour and worked four 24 hours shifts and got three days off.

Soviet destroyer explodes and sinks

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — A Soviet guided-missile destroyer exploded and sank in the Black Sea on a trial cruise, Istanbul port officials said today. The semiofficial Anatolia news agency said there were no survivors, but gave no indication of how many men were aboard.

The authoritative British publication Jane's Fighting Ships shows that a comparable American destroyer carries about 350 men.

Turkish naval sources said the ship exploded Wednesday but Anatolia said in a later report that the disaster occurred two weeks ago.

Turkish port sources said the destroyer belonged to the Kashin class and was attached to the Soviet Black Sea fleet.

The Guinness Book of World Records says the worst peacetime disaster involving a military ship occurred in 1963 off Cape Cod, Mass., when the U.S. nuclear-powered submarine Thresher was lost with all 129 aboard.

The worst wartime naval disaster occurred in 1945 off Danzig when a Soviet submarine sank the German ship Wilhelm Gustloff, killing 7,700 men.

Jane's says a Kashin class destroyer is 470 feet long, 52 feet wide, weighs 5,200 tons fully loaded, has four missile launchers, four antiaircraft guns, four rocket launchers and five torpedo tubes.

Kashin class destroyers were the world's first warships to rely entirely on gas turbine propulsion for quick acceleration, but they have been rapidly outdated by later classes. Jane's said 19 of the ships were built in Leningrad and Nikolayev.

U.S. Navy officials in London said they had no information about the explosion of the Soviet destroyer. The NATO southern naval command in Italy said it too had no information on the report.

A spokesman for the U.S. 6th Fleet in Naples said his headquarters also had no information, but pointed out that such reports normally would go to the U.S. Navy offices in Turkey.

The Turkish navy monitors Soviet naval movements from the Black Sea into the Mediterranean through the Dardanelles, which are controlled by Turkey.

Committee did not register

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 13-year-old political committee set up for newly appointed presidential aide Donald Rumsfeld did not register under the 1972 federal campaign reporting law until it went out of business this year, documents on file with the Senate show.

Rumsfeld's former campaign manager said the committee was not required to file under the law that took effect April 7, 1972. But officials charged with monitoring the act said the committee should have registered, if not when the law took effect, at least by 1973 when it took preliminary soundings on a possible Rumsfeld race for the Senate in Illinois.

Rumsfeld, a former House member who resigned from Congress in 1969 to join the Nixon administration, was due in Washington today for his new assignment as an assistant to President Ford. He is to serve as coordinator of the White House staff and schedule. He has been U.S. ambassador to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Rumsfeld could not be reached for comment on the political committee, initially created in 1961 for the first of his four campaigns for the House.

Reports filed last February show that the Rumsfeld Committee had a balance of nearly $20,000 at the beginning of 1969. It had some income primarily from interest, and spent nearly $10,000 in closing out 1968 House campaign expenses before the reporting law took effect.

The law says a political committee must register if it "anticipates receiving contributions or making expenditures" of more than $1,000 during a calendar year.

Chicago attorney Donald Lowitz, who served as Rumsfeld's campaign manager in four successful House races between 1962 and 1968, said the committee wasn't required to register because it didn't anticipate receiving or spending money, since Rumsfeld had resigned Congress and was serving in appointive positions in the Nixon administration.

However, committee records on file here say: "In 1973, the committee began to consider the possibility of its proposing that Mr. Rumsfeld be a candidate for the United States Senate from the State of Illinois in the 1974 election."

The unit had a professional opinion poll conducted and arranged to hire an office manager but decided not to pursue a Rumsfeld senatorial campaign.

It paid $10,000 in oustanding bills, taxes and final accounting fees, contributed $3,057 to the U.S. Treasury and went out of business on Feb. 4. A final accounting of its activities for the previous five years was received by Secretary of the Senate Francis R. Valeo on Feb. 8.

When asked about the case, officials in Valeo's office said the committee should have registered within 10 days of the decision to take preliminary steps toward a senatorial campaign.

Drugs, cash and equipment stolen

Police reported Thursday that a break-in occured early Thursday morning at the Flat Creek Veterinary Hospital, 1701 West Main.

It was reported that a large amount of drugs and medicines were taken by thieves. Police said that they did not know the types of drugs taken. A $600 microscope and a $150 medical instrument were also stolen. Thieves also took an adding machine, a calculator, a telephone tape recorder and a camera. No value was set for those items or the drugs.

Police said that $418 in checks and cash were also taken. Entry to the building was gained by prying open a rear door. No suspects have been arrested in connection with the incident.

Mundy is released after posting bond

Lawrence Mundy, 28, 1001 Crescent Drive, was released from Pettis County jail Thursday morning after posting $3,500 bond. Mundy was arraigned in Magistrate Court Wednesday for possession of a controlled substance, LSD.

His preliminary hearing date in Magistrate Court is set for Oct. 10.

Mundy was arrested at 8:20 a.m. Wednesday, after a warrant was issued Monday. The LSD was allegedly discovered after he had been stopped by Sedalia police on July 27. The substance found in his possession at the time was being checked from that date until this week.

Ground patrol seeking guns, and guerrillas

By The Associated Press

Israel sent a ground patrol into Lebanon today to search for guns and guerrillas, Lebanese officials said.

In other Middle East developments, a radical group pulled out of the main Palestinian organization, and three Dutch citizens were jailed in Israel on suspicion of security offenses.

The Israeli patrol crossed the Lebanese border before dawn and carried out a house-to-house search for arms and guerrillas in the village of Blida, authorities there said.

The search lasted an hour, then the patrol pulled out, covering its retreat to the Israeli border a mile away with machine-gun fire in the air, village officials said. No captives were taken.

The incursion came on the first anniversary of the 1973 war, coinciding with Yom Kippur, the Jewish Day of Atonement, and the 10th day of Ramadan, the month-long Moslem holiday of dawn-to-dusk fasting.

At the Chatila refugee camp outside Beirut, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine announced its withdrawal from the Executive Committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Spokesman Abu Maher accused the PLO leadership of "treacherous pro-American tendencies" and said two other major guerrilla groups were contemplating withdrawal.

The PFLP, a leftist group known for hijacking Western airliners, is led by Dr. George Habash, a Marxist extremist. The PLO, the group that embraces the major guerrilla organizations, is headed by Yasir Arafat, a moderate who seeks a political settlement with Israel.

In Jerusalem, lawyer Felicia Langer said that three Dutch nationals were being held by Israeli police on suspicion of security offenses.

Mrs. Langer said they were all Arab affairs students from Leiden.

Police were not immediately available for comment.

Man charged in horse show altercation

Peace disturbance charges were filed Monday in Pettis County Magistrate Court against Jerry Manes relating to an incident at the Missouri State Fair on Aug. 23.

Manes allegedly threatened Don E. Brown, Shawnee Mission, Kan., after a horse show when Brown was taking pictures of horses leaving the Coliseum at the Fairgrounds.

Brown was accompanied to the fairgrounds by members of Animal-Kind Inc. who were investigating a complaint they received from Mr. and Mrs. Leland Cox, Dearborn, alleging that horses were being sored before Tennessee walking horse events.

A U.S. Department of Agriculture inspector, Dr. Glen Patterson, was at the scene, but did not make any inspections of the horses according to Ann Gonnerman, president of Animal Kind Inc.

The Pettis County Sheriff's office said it did not know the whereabouts of Manes, but had sent the warrant to West Plains, which may be the location of the stables for which Manes rode.

GOP committees will select two candidates tonight

The Republican city and county committees will hold meetings tonight at the Ramada Inn.

At 7 p.m., the county committee will select a candidate for Presiding Judge. Incumbent candidate Harry Walch, who was unopposed in the primary, recently withdrew from the race for health reasons.

Asked whether selecting an alternative candidate at this late date would dampen Republican chances of retaining the presiding judgeship, County Chairman Hank Monsees said, "I don't really think so because Harry has built up a certain amount of momentum. He has followed finely in the example of Henry Lamm and Jim Green and I think, based on that precedent, the candidate we select tonight will not be hurt by this unfortunate turn of events which led to Harry's decision.

City Republicans will gather at 7:30 p.m. to discuss the upcoming special balloting to elect a successor to Ralph Hamlin, who was elected city Municipal court Judge in April. Hamlin died before taking office and was replaced by appointee Jack Cunningham. Cunningham has since filed for the office.

Following the two meetings, a reception will be held for the party's poll workers.

Fifi worst disaster in Honduran history

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — No one in Honduras paid much attention early last week as Hurricane Fifi crept through the Caribbean sea.

It was just another storm to the 2.6 million people in this triangle-shaped Central American country.

Fifi is gone. But Honduras, a nation reeking of poverty, is flat on its back with Fifi's name etched forever in the national memory, the worst disaster in Honduran history.

The government estimates that 7,500-8,000 died. No one will ever know for sure how many perished. The National Emergency Committee said another 100,000 are homeless.

No one knows how many people died of hunger after Fifi destroyed almost 50 per cent of the nation's food crops. The Hondurans were undernourished, hungry, in abject poverty, before the storm came. In their usual state of malnutrition they were not up to holding on for the three, four or five days it took for the floods to recede enough to get food and shelter to them.

With almost half this season's corn and bean crops gone, the nation faces starvation.

Poverty is common in Honduras; the average annual income is less than $260. Many peasants have almost no cash income; they live off their crops and by bartering. Beggars abound in the cities. Boys drop out of first grade to shine shoes to help buy food.

People were warned about Fifi. But few paid attention. Only 10 days before, Hurricane Carmen skirted the coast without serious damage. Even if the barefoot, poorly clad people wanted to leave they had nowhere to go and no way to get there.

Measured against other killer storms, Fifi was just a kitten. The storm had sustained winds of 125 miles an hour with gusts up to 140 m.p.h. Carmen's winds gusted up to 175 m.p.h. and there was no large loss of life.

Fifi did her damage with water. She dumped up to 24 inches of rain in 36 hours on northeastern Honduras.

As Fifi's eye trudged slowly offshore, tides 15 feet above normal rose in the mangrove swamps, blocking the flow of the rivers. The torrential rain suddenly turned tranquil mountain streams into raging torrents.

Drug firm allegedly withheld information

By JOHN STOWELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A leading pharmaceutical firm is selling in almost every country except the United States a drug it has known for nearly 10 years causes ulcers in monkeys, a Senate committee has been told.

Subpoenaed testimony before a Senate health subcommittee also disclosed that Ciba-Geigy Corp. allegedly withheld adverse information about it's "Slow-K" potassium supplement from the Food and Drug Administration until a former Ciba executive blew the whistle.

Slow-K is undergoing clinical trials in American patients now, pending FDA approval for marketing as a prescription drug in the United States.

The drug is designed to replace the potassium lost by patients taking diuretics for fluid loss. Some medical experts say orange juice and bananas achieve the same result.

Tulane University medical professor F. Gilbert McMahon, a Ciba vice president for three years, confirmed that it was he who tipped the FDA on May 26, 1972, of company studies showing that Slow-K caused gastric ulcers in monkeys.

Ciba had applied to the FDA on Aug. 27, 1971, for permission to conduct experimental studies with the drug prior to seeking marketing approval.

McMahon, who spent eight years with drug companies and 24 years in clinical pharmacology and human research, emphasized that he was appearing under subpoena and that he had no ax to grind with the FDA or the pharmaceutical industry.

The Ciba monkey studies had been performed by Dr. Albert Earl in early 1965. He left Ciba in 1969 after 21 years with the firm.

Introduced into the hearing record was a memo prepared for, but never signed by, Dr. J. Richard Crout, then director of the FDA's Office of Scientific Evaluation, recommending that legal action be considered against Ciba for not submitting the monkey studies.

FDA investigators sent to check out McMahon's tip were told by Ciba on Aug. 18, 1972, that the data had been overlooked, according to the memo prepared by Dr. E. DeVaughn Belton, then head of the FDA's team investigating cardiovascular drugs.

"Although we recognize that the firm eventually submitted the data, it is our opinion that the firm has violated the law by omission of 'material information...,'" said the memo prepared by Belton.

State to get matching FEA program funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kansas and Missouri have been alloted money from a $10 million fund established by the Federal Energy Administration to reimburse states for fuel allocation activities and to implement conservation and resource development programs.

Kansas will receive $128,000 and Missouri will get $212,100.

Administrator John C. Sawhill said Wednesday the money was provided under the Special Energy Research Development Appropriations Act which became law last June 30.

The FEA will match state funds on a 2-1 basis to cover the cost of qualifying for the program. The agency had distributed $5 million to the states before as partial reimbursement for running state allocation programs before July 1.

Railroad problems

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The railroad industry is much like the energy field—no one cares about them until their existence is threatened, the president and board chairman of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway says.

"What corrective actions we have been able to get have been too little and too late," Richard C. Grayson told the 52nd annual convention of the Association of Railroad Editors Wednesday.

Rail carriers are geared to the mass movement of freight, which will become more important as energy conservation requires carriers that are more efficient fuel users, he said.

"Without rail transportation, the cost of everything we need would be inflated still further," Grayson said.

W.J. Usery, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, told the group he hoped no labor dispute would stand in the way of what industry leaders have termed a "railroad renaissance."

He said the industry has enjoyed relative labor peace lately but key contracts expire soon.

A long dispute could set off a cycle of industrial war with devastating consequences, Usery warned.

Gorillas really know how to enjoy life. They rise about 8 a.m., eat for a couple of hours, rest between 10 and 2, then eat a little more before retiring to their pads about 6 in the evening. Although they live in the forest or mountains where it is often foggy and rainy, they love the sun and will lie for hours on their backs basking in the warm sunshine, according to Grzimek's "Animal Life Encyclopedia."

Closing college saved

MOUNT CARROLL, Ill. (AP) — Shimer College announced last year that a decrease in enrollment was forcing it to close the books on 120 years' tradition. It had lost 30 students.

But a clamor from students, faculty and alumni and $300,000 in donations forced trustees to take another look. So, a new academic year has started for the tiny liberal arts school known for its emphasis on classic literature and innovative teaching programs.

"We're so small that we didn't need millions to save it," said Ralph Hough, executive assistant to Shimer President Esther G. Weinstein.

"Now our biggest problem is convincing people that we're not dead. There was a lot of publicity when we decided to close, but no one's said anything about our staying open."

The school, which opened in September 1853, was slated to close Dec. 31, 1973.

Students, parents and alumni donated the money; administrators pared budgets and the registrar launched a direct-mail recruitment campaign.

"We had two $25,000 donations, but most of the money came in small gifts — $5, $10, a few $100 donations," said Hough.

Fall enrollment climbed back to about 200, and the doors to the 16 aging buildings on the 40-acre campus stayed open.

"For a school of 1,000 students, losing 30 isn't a big thing," Hough said. "But here it was a disaster."

Officials hope the recruitment program will soon boost enrollment to about 400.

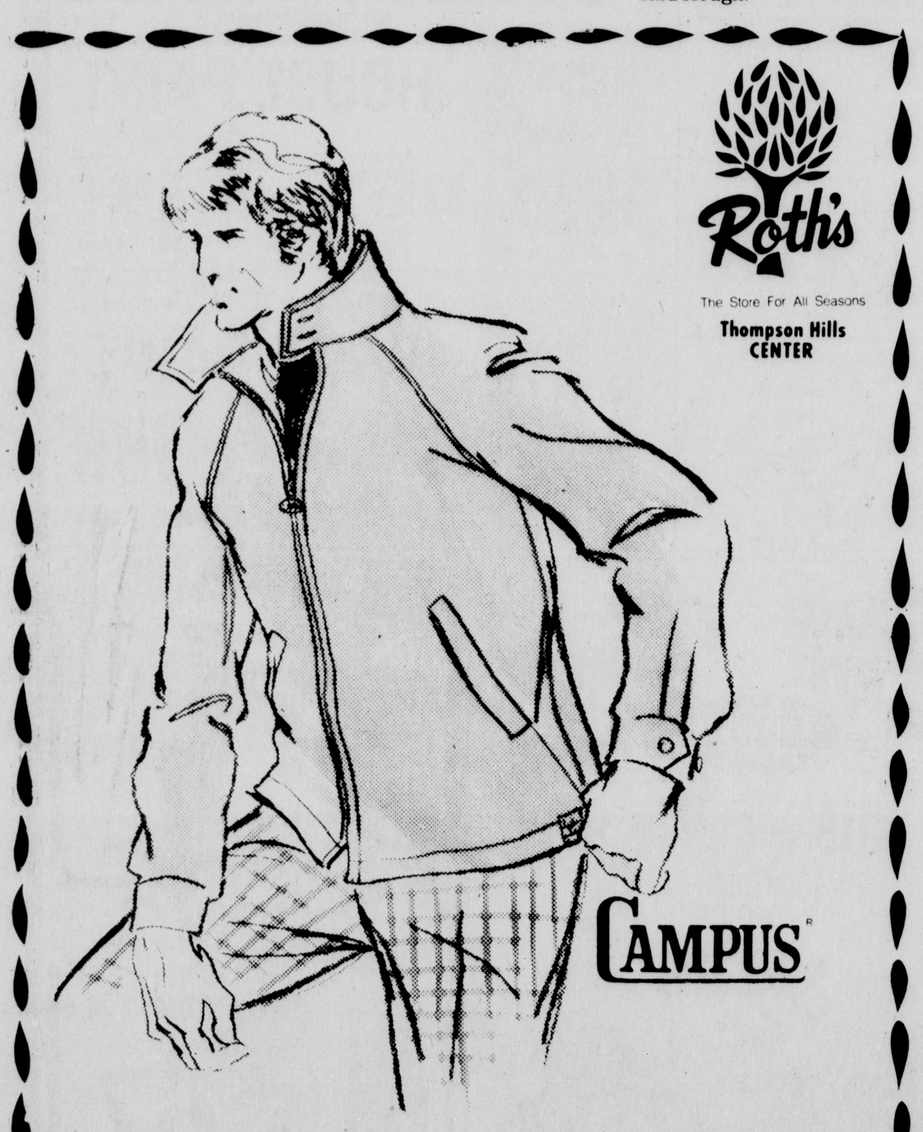

The school boasts a one-to-nine faculty-student ratio, and offers little in the way of vocational majors, popular at larger schools.

It pioneered early entrance programs for bright students. To graduate, a student must pass comprehensive examinations regardless of class credits compiled in his studies.

Many students major in general education. Others follow prelaw and premedical courses.

Shimer is still not out of the woods, but it's no longer under the gun.

"We're no Harvard yet — financially at least, but everyone decided (Shimer) was too valuable to let it vanish," said Hough.

CHEVELLE Mid-size, easy to drive, room for six, mid-priced, strong reputation for value. America's most popular intermediate.

MONTE CARLO Its special ability: making you feel good. About the way it looks and drives. About your own taste and judgment.

CHEVROLET'S NEW EFFICIENCY SYSTEM FOR 1975 It's the key part of a program aimed at helping our new cars run leaner (more economically), run cleaner—and save you money every mile.

The Efficiency System is standard on all 1975 Chevrolets with V8 or 6-cylinder engines. It's a series of significant engineering improvements working together for the very first time.

Components include High Energy Ignition, catalytic converter, Early Fuel Evaporation and steel-belted radial ply tires. In sum, the System is designed to heighten the pleasure and lower the cost of driving a 1975 Chevrolet—to bring you a better running car in many ways, along with improved fuel economy, more miles between recommended maintenance and an engine that stays cleaner internally because of no-lead fuel.

Your Chevrolet dealer will gladly give you the details and answer your questions. See him and the sensible 1975 Chevrolets starting September 27.

Ann Landers

Mother gives definite reasons for each child

Dear Ann Landers: I have been amused by the letters in your column from first, the middle child who complained about his spot, then the oldest, and finally the youngest. Here is a charming little essay I found stuck between two baby books in our library. I don't know who wrote it or when I first read it, but I'd like to share it with you.

Dear First Born: I've always loved you best because you were our first miracle. You were the genesis of a marriage and the fulfillment of young love.

You sustained us through the hamburger years, the first apartment (furnished in Early Poverty), our first mode of transportation (1955 Feet), and the 7-inch TV we paid on for 36 months.

You were new, had unused grandparents, and enough clothes for a set of triplets. You were the original model for a mom and a dad who were trying to work the bugs out. You got the strained lamb, the open safety pins and three-hour naps.

You were the beginning.

Dear Middle Child: I've always loved you best because you drew a tough spot in the family and it made you stronger for it.

You cried less, had more patience, wore faded hand-me-downs, and never in your life did anything first. But it only made you more special. You were the one we relaxed with and realized a dog could kiss you and you wouldn't get sick. You could cross a street by yourself long before you were old enough to get married. And you helped us understand the world wouldn't collapse if you went to bed with dirty feet.

You were the child of our busy, ambitious years. Without you we never could have survived the job changes and the tedium and routine that is marriage.

To The Baby: I've always loved you best because while endings are generally sad, you are such a joy. You readily accepted the milk-stained bibs, the lower bunk, the cracked baseball bat, the baby book that had nothing written in its except a recipe for graham-cracker piecrust that someone had jammed between the pages.

You are the one we held onto so tightly. You are the link with our past, a reason for tomorrow. You darken our hair, quicken our steps, square our shoulders, restore our vision, and give us a sense of humor that security, maturity and durability can't provide.

When your hairline takes on the shape of Lake Erie and your own children tower over you, you will still be our baby. — A Mother.

Dear Friend: Beautiful — thanks for sharing.

Dear Ann Landers: I thought you were supposed to give advice. Well why don't you do your job? Recently a Buffalo reader asked if there was a poker hand called a double-ace flush. You said, "Not in Sioux City. As for Buffalo, I can't say."

Well, there IS such a hand, and if you'd have looked it up in Hoyle's you'd have known.

On page 53, it says, "Any wild card may represent another card, whether or not the holder of the wild card also has the card designated. This permits double or even triple-ace-high flushes." Get on the ball, honey. — B.B.

Dear B.B.: Thanks for Hoyle's answer, but in Sioux City, they never went in for those wild-card games.

Don't get burned by a "line" that's too hot to handle. Play it cool with Ann Landers' guide to "Necking and Petting — What Are the Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 3346, Chicago, Ill. 60654, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

People in the news

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House officials have neither confirmed nor denied reports that 76-year-old career diplomat David K.E. Bruce will be named ambassador to NATO.

Outgoing ambassador Donald Rumsfeld has been named to a White House staff post. Bruce was enroute home Wednesday from his tour as first head of the U.S. liaison office in Peking, and published reports indicated he would be appointed to the NATO position.

Former Republican National Chairman George Bush has been named to succeed Bruce in Peking.

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev says prospects for continued cooperation with the United States are good under the administration of President Ford.

Brezhnev, speaking on Wednesday at a dinner for visiting Hungarian leader Janos Kadar, said establishment of better U.S.-Russian relations during recent years has been "highly acclaimed in the U.S.-S.R.

"Therefore, we received with satisfaction the statement by President Gerald Ford about his personal intention and that of his administration to continue the course for further development of relations between our two countries in the same direction.

"On our part we told the President we stand for maintaining contacts for consolidation of peace, mutual trust and good neighborly relations between our two countries."

BALTIMORE (AP) — Detroit Tigers designated hitter Al Kaline got a congratulatory telephone call from President Ford after becoming the 12th player in major league history to record 3,000 hits.

"He congratulated me and said he was happy for me, and told me to be sure and stop in and see him when I was in Washington," Kaline said.

The 39-year-old ballplayer reached the milestone on Tuesday night in a game against the Baltimore Orioles and received the call from the President shortly before another game here on Wednesday night.

A year after its founding, Halifax, N.S., was almost totally razed by a fire that swept the settlement in 1750.

Corrections court judge is appointed

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Murray L. Randall, 53, a law partner of the Democratic majority leader in the Missouri Senate, has been named a judge on the St. Louis Court of Criminal Correction.

Gov. Christopher S. Bond named Randall Wednesday to succeed retiring Judge David W. Fitzgibbons.

Randall is a Republican, a former assistant U.S. attorney, and is the law partner of Sen. Lawrence Lee, D-St. Louis.

On the Court of Criminal Correction, Randall joins Richard J. Brown, who was suspended for 30 days Aug. 27 by the state Supreme Court for signing blank bail bonds that were filled in when he was off the bench, and for accepting guilty pleas when the defendant was not present.

Randall was on a three-member panel nominated by the 22nd Circuit Judicial Commission.

Also nominated were William M. Nicholls, a former magistrate in St. Louis, and Stephen H. Gilmore, a former assistant U.S. attorney in St. Louis.

Connecticut to open recycling operation soon

By J. THOMAS FAILLA
Associated Press Writer

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — The first plant in a statewide program to turn Connecticut's trash into fuel, glass and metal will emerge here soon on the site of an abandoned forge.

Such a large-scale recycling operation, handling everything from cellophane wrappers to refrigerators in one continuous process, has never been tried in this country.

From the outside it'll bear the smart look of a modern, well-landscaped factory. On the inside a concoction of new and old technologies will give it the appearance of the house that Jack built.

A churning, whirring, gurgling collection of pulverizers, blowers, conveyers, emulsions and magnets will gorge daily on 1,500 tons of waste from area communities, transforming 92 per cent of it into usable fuels for electric power plants and raw materials for bottlemakers and smelters.

Promoters, with fingers crossed, say it'll work. The state invested $1 million in a study and set up a special agency with bonding power to see that it does. And the area towns, which five years ago banded together with little more than good intentions to lick their mutual solid waste problems, say it had better.

"We knew at some point in time we wouldn't have a landfill left. Now all we have is anywhere from 6 to 18 months left," said John McCarthy Jr., president of the Interlocal Solid Waste Advisory Board.

The $30-million plant is the keystone of a $295-million plan to cope with solid waste statewide. Plant construction, slated to begin some time this fall, will take nearly two years. It will be the prototype of 10 similar plants around the state.

The plants will go into operation one per year, separating bulk refuse into reusable materials such as aluminum, glass and ferrous metals which will be sold.

The recovery will be the end point of a network of 45 centers where garbage will be collected and shipped to the recovery plants by truck, barge or rail.

By 1985, state officials predict, the plants will recover annually 60 per cent of its throwaways. The state now only recycles about 5 per cent of its waste products, officials estimate.

In Connecticut and the rest of the East Coast, McCarthy says, there is very little space for burying garbage, or even the ash from incinerated waste. Residential land is expensive; other land may not be environmentally safe.

The area communities once considered a sophisticated incinerator to reduce the amount of trash and make a safe land fill. But McCarthy said it still didn't offer a solution to the often politically volatile landfill question.

More than 3.3 million tons of garbage — just over a ton per each state resident — went to Connecticut dumps and incinerators in 1972. It is predicted the amount will double in 20 years.

State environment officials say only one incinerator in Connecticut meets federal air pollution standards and 14 of the 144 landfills are considered environmentally sound.

To upgrade the existing disposal systems and build new ones along conventional lines to handle added volume would cost at least $342 million, the state estimates.

The Connecticut Resource Recovery Authority and the local towns have contracted with Garrett Research Associates of Laverne, Calif., to build and run the first plant and find markets for the recovered materials.

The plant will sit in an industrial section of this factory city, chosen for its easy access by surface and water transportation and its central position to the six to eight towns that will use it.

Trash will be brought to the facility by 60 trailer trucks per day from five transfer stations, 4 to 10 miles away.

All refuse will be poured into a 20,000-square-foot sunken storage area where it will await feeding through two automobile shredders.

Heavy-duty magnets then will extract ferrous metals from the heap. From there the refuse will move on to classifier towers where blowers and vacuums separate the lighter portion from the heavier.

The light portion will be sent through dryers in a final process to prepare a confetti-like material suitable as a supplement to oil in boilers at nearby electric utility plants.

Depending on the petroleum prices, the confetti will bring $12 to $15 per ton, McCarthy said.

The heavier fraction will pass through an amino acid-water emulsion where glass will be separated. The process, used for years in the mining industry, coats particles of glass with a chemical that causes them to float to the surface in a froth that will be skimmed, dried and shipped to a northeastern Connecticut bottle manufacturer. The glass will make a low-grade, light green bottle.

A $19 per ton price has been promised in a letter of intent from the company, McCarthy said.

Aluminum is pulled from the remaining refuse through the use of an electromagnetic force field that causes chips of the metal to jump off a conveyer belt into bins.

McCarthy said the aluminum will bring $450 to $510 per ton and the ferrous metals removed earlier will draw $94 per ton.

Users of the plant will pay $4 to $12 per ton to deposit their trash, but the authority hopes to refund some of the cost through sale of the recycled metal and glass.

From the reclamation plant, the remaining refuse, about eight-day truck loads, will be carted to a 65-acre landfill at a gravel excavation, along the Housatonic River 10 miles away. At that rate, the leftover waste from the towns will fill the site in about 20 years, McCarthy said.

We raised the gas mileage in every 1975 Olds model.

Every '75 Olds has a new Maximum Mileage System that helps make it a better car in several ways.

Our best mileage in years. Smooth-running engines. Fewer tune-ups and less routine maintenance.

And—better exhaust emission control.

The System represents the most advanced engineering and technology we can built into a '75 Olds. It includes a new catalytic converter (see below)—and a lot more.

There's a new high-energy ignition, for a hotter spark and improved ignition performance.

Also, Olds engineers adjusted shift points in transmissions. Installed low-ratio economy axles. And made GM-spec steel-belted radial tires standard.

As you can see, we've done a lot to improve the gas mileage capability of every 1975 Oldsmobile.

GM

New Catalytic Converter—designed for long life.

This "pod" full of platinum-palladium coated beads provides a new way to reduce most emissions—after combustion, in the exhaust. It does a more effective job—and it eliminates some of the gas-robbing, combustion-stage controls of the past. Best of all, it allowed Olds engineers to re-tune the engines to run smoother and give better MPG than last year.

ROTC enrollments increase

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Increased participation in the Reserve Officer Training Corps program at universities in Kansas and Missouri is attributed to varying developments by military officials.

The end of the Vietnam War, the Watergate scandal and current economic conditions were given as reasons for the upturn at the University of Missouri, University of Kansas, Kansas State and Central Missouri State.

Since September 1973, enrollment in ROTC programs at the four schools has increased from 760 to 806. There were slight dips in some programs, and the big increase occurred at Central Missouri State, from 99 last year to 149 this year.

"The turn back to ROTC is not dramatic, but the trend no longer is negative," said Col. Edwin M. Basham, professor of military science at Kansas State. Participation had been on the downswing during the late 1960s and into this year.

"The Defense Department is the only part of the government that has kept clean through Watergate," Basham said, offering one explanation for the turnaround. "People are beginning to forget about Vietnam and campus attitudes are changing. Students no longer see the uniform as a bad image."

ROTC enrollment at Kansas State reached a peak of 2,200 in 1964 when it was a compulsory course for male students, but the program became optional the following year and the downturn started.

Lt. Col. Alverado Kyser, head of the Army ROTC program at Central Missouri, attributes the increased interest to the fact that ROTC offers "a section option for employment."

"The student can pursue a civilian career or, if that job market is full, go to the military. This gives the student a dual opportunity for employment and a guarantee of $10,000 a year after graduation," Kyser said.

Capt. Jim Bowers, commandant of Air Force cadets at the University of Kansas, said the attitude on campus has changed from antimilitarism to amilitarism, "apathy maybe."

But he said there is encouragement, despite a one-year drop from 85 to 66 this fall in the Air Force program.

"There's not so much resentment towards us. Now we are becoming acceptable' again after the controversy of the Vietnam conflict," Bowers said.

Col. Robert Williams, who heads the Air Force program at Missouri, also cited the economic situation as the reason for an upturn "because it offers a steady job and steady pay." His program increased from 106 to 143 in a year.

Col. Timothy Donovan, head of the Missouri Army program, which increased in participation from 74 to 117, attributes some of the change to beefed-up recruiting and changes in the program.

"One of the major complaints had been for years that ROTC had the image of people just walking around on the drill field with a rifle," he said, but ROTC students now are getting instruction in map reading, weaponry and other areas through actual field practice.

ABC awaiting survey results

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC News is awaiting the results of a year-long survey of what viewers might like to see if the network expands its weeknight television news show from a half-hour to 45 minutes or an hour.

But it doesn't mean ABC plans to break the half-hour news barrier soon.

The survey, says ABC News President Bill Sheehan, "is just an exercise because we really don't have any hope of expanding the 'ABC Evening News' right now. But we want to be ready in case the day comes."

He said the study, conducted by Frank N. Magid Associates, an Iowa-based news consulting and research firm, simply asks, "What are people looking for if the networks go to an hour or 45 minutes?"

He recalled that when an earlier survey was made of viewer preferences in half-hour network news shows, "what we found quite clearly was that people watching the early evening news broadcasts were looking for a pretty quick summary of what had happened that day.

"Now, what we're looking for is to find out if they just want more of that or whether there's an appetite for longer, analytical kinds of material or 'magazine' kinds of material."

The idea of a 45-minute or hour-long news show on week nights has been discussed at the three networks for several years. But it still remains only a dream, with nothing definite planned, the networks say.

Until 1963, they only broadcast 15-minute evening news programs. NBC went to a half-hour in September that year, followed by CBS in December. ABC says it adopted the 30-minute format in January 1967.

Right now, the official line at ABC, whose weeknight news show is carried by 197 stations, is that an hour-long version of it will regularly appear within the next five years.

CBS, whose evening news is carried by 194 stations, and NBC, its nightly news carried by 209, also predict hour-long network evening news programs in the future, but they also won't predict approximately when.

Problems in probing arson cases

The difficulty of conducting suspected arson investigations was emphasized Tuesday to members of the Noon-Day Optimist Club by Deputy State Fire Marshall Richard Dyer.

At the club's weekly meeting, held at the Bothwell Hotel, Dyer said it was very hard to substantiate cases of arson unless eye witnesses are available. Dyer, who has served since June, 1973, stated that a greater monetary loss is incurred in the United States by arson than by all other crimes combined.

Because of staff shortages, Dyer indicated, the state fire marshall's staff is unable to perform as complete a follow-up service as desired.

It was also announced at the meeting that the group's annual installation of officers will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Walnut Hills Country Club. The monthly board meeting, it was reported, will be held at noon Thursday at the Sirloin Stockade restaurant.

A guest, city prosecutor and assistant county prosecuting attorney Robert Liston, was introduced by club member Gary Fleming.

Presiding at the meeting was club president J. Edgar Harvey, with the invocation being offered by Lee Deason.

Ford to address FFA convention

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford has scheduled a visit to Kansas City Oct. 16 to address a convention of Future Farmers of America.

The White House announced the plans Wednesday. It had been announced previously that Ford would speak in Indianapolis that day and might extend the trip to South Dakota and perhaps other cities. A spokesman in the press secretary's office said the Kansas City engagement has been added.

The National Gallery of Canada was established in 1880.

Foster homes needed

The need for more foster homes in the county, especially for older children and children with physical and mental handicaps, was emphasized at a recent meeting of the Pettis County Child Welfare Advisory Committee.

"Pettis County continues to have a shortage of foster homes which creates problems in locating the best home for a specific child within a limited period of time," commented Roma Bass, supervisor of social services for the county Family Services office.

Various possible promotional activities, designed to advertise the need for foster homes, were discussed. These included radio announcements, bumper stickers and newspaper advertisements. Board members Mrs. John Ellison and Mrs. Vernon Horn volunteered to speak to all sororities in Sedalia regarding the need.

It was also noted that the United Fund provides $1,500 a year to child welfare for immediate use to children in need before the normal channels have been set up. Board member Mrs. Charles Hendrickson announced that she has investigated the possibility of forming a local Big Brother organization, with no action being taken by the board at the meeting.

Several board members agreed to volunteer to transport pre-school children attending the Children's Therapy Center.

HUGHESVILLE — Three judges in the annual Missouri Community Betterment competition recently conducted an on-site inspection here, it was announced recently by Mrs. Frankie Phillips, publicity director for the local MCB club here.

They were Marge Stolz, Warrensburg; Dick Martin, Kirksville; and Bob Cullers, Trenton.

The judges, accompanied by nine members of the local MCB club, toured the community park and noted the various improvements and additions. These included new restroom facilities, remodeled shelter house, new community scales and a commemorative marker honoring Joe Williams, husband of Mrs. Nell Williams, who donated the land for the park.

The judges also inspected the new gymnasium, music room, cafeteria and kitchen in the high school here.

The Hughesville Community Betterment Club has entered competition with other Missouri cities in the 0-500 population category. The top winners in the state-wide MCB competition will be announced at the group's annual awards banquet and conference to be held Oct. 22 in Jefferson City.

Iowa is growing corn on strip-mined land

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP)—Corn can be grown on strip-mined land, according to initial conclusions reached at the midway point in a two year research project by the University of Iowa Department of Geology.

"The corn yield is beyond our expectations," says G. Todd Ririe, a U of I graduate student who is charge of the project.

Ririe's optimism was confirmed by County Extension Office personnel who expect the average yield from the one-acre test plot on strip mined land to equal the crop average for Mahaska County.

"There is no doubt that corn can be grown on strip-mined land," said U of I associate Prof. Lon Drake. "Now the question that remains is the economic feasibility of such an undertaking."

Ririe and Drake began their research into strip-mined land nearly a year ago. After designing a plan of action for the study, they obtained $12,000 to finance the project from Iowa Power and Light Co., Unversity Avenue Coal Co., Iowa Southern Utilities and the University of Iowa.

The project is designed primarily to develop a method that would permit the upper layers of dirt removed in strip mining to be saved and later replaced over the remaining spoils so that the land could once again be used to grow a cash crop such as corn.

Field work began last spring at the Hull Conservation site four miles west of Oskaloosa. An acre of spoils piles was bulldozed to an almost level plain and the spoils were then covered with a wedge of dirt ranging from zero to 36 inches in thickness. The idea was to find the minimal depth of dirt that would support a corn crop.

After the test plot was landscaped, Marvin Van Zee, a nearby farmer, prepared the land and planted Funks 444 corn as he did in his own fields. Using Van Zee's fields for comparison with the test area, present indications are that, while his land will considerably exceed the average yield for Mahaska County, corn yields on the test plot will match the county average.

Findings also indicate that a dirt cover of somewhere between 12 and 18 inches is sufficient to produce competitive crop yields in average or better growing years.

Based on 1973 cost data, the cost of reclaiming strip-mined land to grow corn by using a 12-inch dirt cover would be comparable to costs of existing methods of restoring stripped land to other production uses, the researchers said.

However, Drake said if it turns out that 18 inches of dirt is needed, the cost of production would be correspondingly higher.

The economics of such an undertaking are futher complicated by other variables, such as the price of coal, the value of farm land and cash returns from crops.

Drake said the final answer of whether the restoration of stripped land to corn production is economically feasible will be determined only through a large-scale experiment.

Judge says 'war is war'

By KATHRYN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — U.S. District Court Judge J. Robert Elliott, in a postscript to his decision reversing William L. Calley's conviction in the My Lai massacre, Wednesday said, "War is war and it is not unusual at all" for innocent civilians, such as the My Lai victims, to be killed.

"It has been so throughout recorded history," he said. "It was so when Joshua took Jericho in ancient Biblical times.

"Now Joshua did not have charges brought against him for the slaughter of the civilian population of Jericho," said the judge. "But then the Lord was with Joshua, we are told."

When Russian troops occupied the Polish border city of Polotsk in 1565, Ivan the Terrible ordered the entire Jewish civilian population drowned, said Elliott.

He said that in World War II, "Churchill ordered the RAF nighttime saturation bombing of German cities, and Eisenhower had his bomber armada carry on the slaughter by day."

Elliott said that half a million Germans were killed, "yet Churchill was acclaimed as the great man of the 20th Century and Eisenhower was twice elected president.

"Then Truman bombed Hiroshima, leaving 80,000 dead, most of whom were women and children, but he was later elected president."

Elliott noted that Gen. William T. Sherman said, "War is hell." The judge added: "As he marched through Georgia to Union sainthood he proved it ..."

Elliott added, "War is hell, and when we take a young man into the Army and train him to kill and train him to take orders and send him into a strange foreign land to follow the flag, and he then in the wild confusion of combat commits an act which, long after the event, is made the basis of a capital criminal charge, simple justice demands that he be treated fairly by the press, by his government and by the branch of the service in which he served."

Elliott said that instead Calley was "pummeled and pilloried by the press ... taunted and tainted by television ... his government denied him access to evidence ... his pleas to the Department of Justice went unanswered ... his conviction was to be a cathartic to cleanse the national conscience and the impellent to improve the Army's image."

Elliott ended his opinion with:

"His country not only denied him a fair trial—it even denied him a fair chance for a fair trial."

Blood in short supply

The mobile blood van of the Community Blood Center of Greater Kansas City will be in Sedalia Monday in an attempt to help alleviate a serious shortage of blood, a center spokesman said.

Carl Schrader, director of donor recruitment for the blood center, said Wednesday that the organization, which serves 58 hospitals, including Bothwell, is not getting the blood it needs.

"I would say that we are nervous about the fact that we're as close to a crisis situation as we've had in the last 18 months," Schrader said.

He said blood donors have been scarcer recently, partly because of the prevalence of colds, flu and hay fever, which often make it impossible for such persons to give blood because of medication they might be taking.

Schrader said the center's supply of the common Type O Positive blood, for example, was down to 60 units, where normally there would be 200.

The mobile van will be at the First Christian Church, 200 South Limit, from 2 to 7 p.m. Monday. The local quota is 120 units. Persons willing to donate may call the church or Mrs. Claude Lambirth, local chairman, for an appointment.

59 deserters are discharged

CAMP ATTERBURY, Ind. (AP) — Fifty-nine deserters have been processed at Camp Atterbury under President Ford's conditional amnesty program, an Army spokesman reports.

The spokesman said the men had been processed, given undesirable discharges and released from the camp by Wednesday. They were informed of the length of alternative service they would have to serve and were told to report to Selective Service centers near their homes for specific assignments, the spokesman added.

There was no indication how many would actually complete the alternative service to have an undesirable discharge changed to a clemency discharge.

The spokesman said calls from persons verified as military absentees totaled 880 by Wednesday afternoon and some 339 had entered the processing center.

The highest price ever paid for a sculpture is the $380,000 given at the New York saleroom of Parke-Bernet on May 5, 1971, for Edgar Degas's bronze Petite Danseuse de Quatorze Ans, executed in an edition of about 12 casts in 1880.

Amnesty may exclude aliens

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice Department officials say President Ford's amnesty program may exclude Vietnam-era draft evaders and deserters who have become citizens of Canada or some other country.

"The Justice Department now feels that these people would not be eligible for the program and that if they came across the border they would run the risk of immediate arrest," a department spokesman said on Wednesday.

But the spokesman, John Russell, added that because of past court challenges and a lack of clear, specific legal precedents on loss of U.S. citizenship, "it's still arguable both ways."

In his proclamaton on Sept. 16 putting the conditional amnesty program into effect, the President declared that "this program will not apply to an individual who is precluded from re-entering under 8 U.S.C. 1182 (a) (22) or other law."

The statute cited bars from re-entering the United States any alien who has left or remained outside the country in order to evade military service during wartime or national emergency.

At issue is whether U.S. citizens who have fled to Canada or abroad and taken out foreign citizenship become aliens, without formally renouncing their U.S. citizenship.

While the outcome potentially could affect several thousand war-resister exiles, at least for now it largely is a symbolic issue because few draft evaders and deserters in Canada or elsewhere have expressed a strong desire to return, except for brief visits.

The Canadian government maintains that it has no specific figures on the number of war resisters who have successfully applied for and been granted Canadian citizenship.

However, figures covering all men from the United States — undifferentiated as to age or military status — show that the number of U.S. males obtaining Canadian citizenship more than doubled between 1969 and 1973 — rising from 715 in 1969 to 1,781 last year.

Over those five years, 5,388 U.S. males had become Canadian citizens.

Jack Colhoun, coeditor of the exile magazine AMEX-Canada, said he estimates about 1,500 of them are war resisters.

However, he noted that Canada requires that persons obtain official "landed immigrant" status and remain in the country at least five years before they can apply for citizenship.

Because the major surge of exiles occurred as the Vietnam war was heating up in the late 1960s, "we're now moving into a period when there are thousands of others who are eligible and are making their decisions" on whether to opt for citizenship, Colhoun said in a telephone interview from Toronto.

Regarding landed immigrants, Canadian government officials again contend they lack any figures specifically on U.S. war resisters.

Over the five years 1968-72, immigrant status was obtained by 22,749 males aged 15 to 29. The annual number increased from 4,076 in 1968 up to 5,510 in 1970, then began declining to 3,980 in 1972.

Alleged robbers indicted

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Three persons arrested last week in the robbery of the State Bank of Burrton have been indicted by a federal grand jury.

The trio—two men and a woman from Wichita—were indicted on charges of bank robbery, conspiracy to commit bank robbery, possession of a firearm in the commission of a felony and possession of an unregistered firearm.

Bonds of $100,000 were set for the three defendants—Sandra Jean Goering, 34, Charles K. Thach Jr., 19, and James L. Keener.

Thach and Miss Goering are in jail. Keener is recovering in a Wichita hospital from wounds he suffered Sept. 19, two days after the bank holdup, in a high-speed chase and shootout with Wichita police.

Police arrested Keener and Thach when their car overturned, and Miss Goering was arrested the previous evening in Wichita.

Police said robbers escaped with about $775 in small change from the Burrton bank Sept. 17 after abducting Judd Durner, a bank cashier, and his wife from their home. Durner was taken to the bank to open the safe, and police said he was shot in the head by the robbers inside the bank. His wife escaped from one of the robbers and was not harmed. Durner has since been released from the hospital.

Authorities said the robbers were able to get only coins because the main portion of the bank's safe was operated by a time lock and could not be opened.

The earth's total surface area is about 197.2 million square miles, of which the land makes up only 57.2 million square miles.

Plane full of marijuana is seized

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — An airplane loaded with about 3½ tons of marijuana worth an estimated $2¼ million was seized by police early today at Lovell Field.

The pilot and copilot were arrested and held at the city jail for possession of marijuana for resale.

Police identified them as Jeffrey L. Seavles, 32, Zephyr Hill, Fla., and James F. Thrasher, 37, Clearwater, Fla.

They said the World War II vintage DC3 twin-engine airplane was apparently privately registered in Florida.

The pilot landed shortly before midnight Wednesday looking for fuel. Airport security officers became suspicious after it appeared the pilot had given the control tower a false call sign in a radio message, police said. When security officers went to the plane they noticed a strong odor.

Police said when the crew crew rented a car and drove from the airport officers obtained a search warrant and found 100 bags aboard the plane.

The 100 bags, according to authorities, each weighed 71 pounds and had Colombian markings.

Airport officials said the destination of the plane was not known.

Court accepts Nixon's bar resignation

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon's resignation from the state bar has been accepted by the California Supreme Court, ending his law career which began before World War II.

In a brief order signed Wednesday by Chief Justice Donald Wright, the court said:

"The Sept. 16, 1974, voluntary resignation signed by Richard M. Nixon as a member of the State Bar of California is accepted without prejudice to further proceedings in any disciplinary matter pending against him before the state bar should he again seek to become a member thereof."

Disciplinary proceedings could be reinstituted against Nixon should he reapply to the state bar.

Expenses for Nixon's transition questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional subcommittee has questioned the government's plan to provide former President Richard M. Nixon's 14-member staff at San Clemente with 77 typewriters, 21 sofas, 44 desks and 186 chairs.

How can 14 workers use 77 typewriters? Sen. Joseph Montoya asked on Wednesday as a Senate appropriations subcommittee sought justification for the $850,000 asked by the Ford administration for Nixon's transition to private life.

Arthur F. Sampson, head of the General Services Administration, told Montoya's subcommittee he is unsure just how many typists there will be. He said the 14 regular employes may be supplemented temporarily by some on loan from other government agencies and by volunteers.

Montoya also questioned whether the government should be expected to pay the salaries of Nixon's maid and butler as part of the transition expenses.

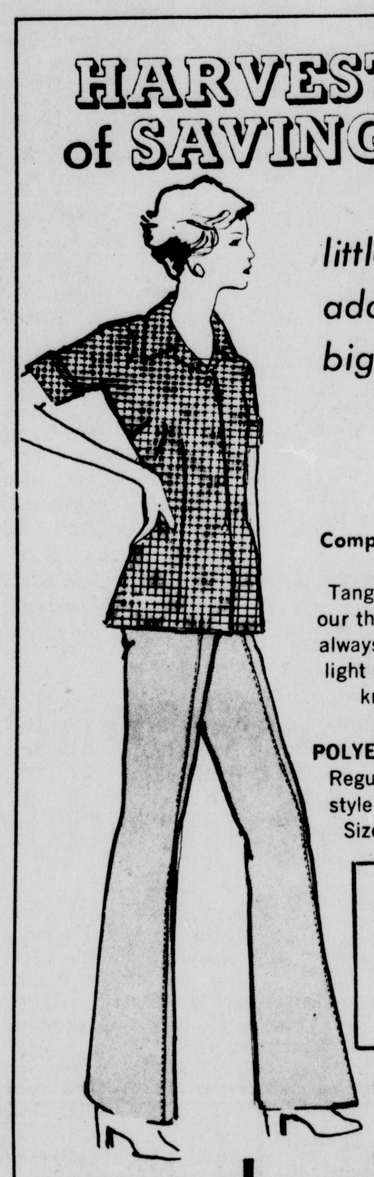

"I don't know exactly what they do," said Roy L. Ash, director of the White House Office of Management and Budget. But he said a case could be made for having aides do menial tasks to free the former president to do more important work.

The administration's request for $850,000 already has been chopped by the House Appropriations Committee to $398,000, including the $60,000 annual pension and $96,000 for staff guaranteed any former president.

Montoya said his panel will finish work on its own bill by today.

Cool reception for tent show proposal

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A circus-tent road show with hymns and patriotic displays being considered by the Agriculture Department to calm public fever over food prices is producing a chill among some members of Congress and consumer spokesmen.

Ralph Nader called the plan—still waiting on official USDA approval—an attempt by Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz to brainwash consumers.

Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., described the project as "Dr. Butz's Travelling Medicine Show" and said the department should worry more seriously about the plight of farmers and consumers.

"Perhaps some of our older citizens and others on fixed incomes would prefer less electronic hoopla from the administration's public imagemakers and more substantive explanations why their food prices go higher and higher, while farmers and ranchers are going broke and middlemen's profits keep increasing," McGovern said.

The comments followed disclosure on Wednesday that an aide to Butz proposed the tent show and that it should visit cities around the country to correct what he described as "the distorted view" consumers are getting.

Rep. Spark M. Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, said USDA "has lost touch with reality" and will be a laughing stock if the plan is adopted. And Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., said it was an "outrageous idea" in its entirety.

No cost estimates were available, but officials said the proposal—still alive for consideration—might involve financial backing from the food industry.

As proposed, the show would be directed at convincing consumers that U.S. food prices are the lowest in the world and that Americans really are getting bargains.

The show would include pageantry and music calling attention to the American history of food and farmers, beginning with the Pilgrims and concluding with this fall's harvest, highlighted by prayers and patriotic songs.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A recently designated cattle industry advisory committee will hold its first meeting next month in Kansas City to discuss what might be ahead for beef producers.

The Agriculture Department said the meeting will be held Oct. 17-18 at the Plaza Inn, 45th and Main, Kansas City.

Among topics to be discussed are: the economic situation and outlook; cattle inventory, production and related data; market news reports on supplies, prices and market conditions; marketing margins and price levels; and feed grain production and exports.

Traffic accidents claim three lives

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

At least three persons were killed in Missouri traffic accidents Wednesday.

Earl E. Cates, 18, Marshall, was injured fatally when his car collided with an approaching auto on Missouri 20 about 15 miles west of Marshall.

Alvin F. Whiteley, 56, Ash Grove, Mo., was killed when his car left a Lawrence County road and slammed into a culvert about seven and a half miles south of Lockwood.

Thomas J. McAlister, 26, Orrick, Mo., died when his car struck a bridge on Missouri 210 about seven miles southeast of Liberty.

School board president held in murder conspiracy

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP)—Charles Merritts Sr., who referred to himself as "the boss" when he was re-elected president of the East St. Louis school board, was being held in the St. Clair County Jail today on charges of conspiring to murder a fellow board member.

Merritts, 58, was arrested along with 28-year-old Donald Hodges after both men were indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiring to murder Clyde Jordan who has opposed Merritts in school matters.

Hodges is a former East St. Louis city employe and had recently been working for the St. Louis Sentinel, a black-oriented weekly newspaper. Both were indicted on two counts of conspiring to have Jordan killed and violating his civil rights. They were being held in lieu of $250,000 bond.

Jordan, publisher of a weekly East St. Louis newspaper, sought police protection last week, claiming he had learned a murder contract had been issued on his life, federal authorities said.

The indictments alleged the defendants jointly contracted to pay $2,500 for Jordan's murder. U.S. Atty. Henry A. Schwarz said the man who allegedly contracted to do the killing was an undercover FBI agent.

The indictments charged that Merritts conspired to have Jordan murdered so the board president could advance a scheme to "extort things of value from suppliers and contractors doing business" with the district.

The grand jury that indicted the pair has been conducting an investigation of alleged kickbacks to government officials by contractors in return for favored treatment in the awarding of bids. School district records have been subpoenaed as part of the investigation.

After his election last April Merritts said, "I am the boss. I will hire only my friends." He is the owner of a chain of liquor stores and a taxicab firm.

Following the indictment, the East St. Louis Federation of Teachers Local 1220 issued a statement saying it was "aghast and appalled."

"It is our hope that the citizenry of District 189 will finally give some thought to obtaining a quality school board and administration after all these investigations are over," the statement said.

There are about 23,000 students and 1,100 teachers in the district.

Wife plans meals for hubby's health

Dear Dr. Lamb — My husband, 42, had a moderate heart attack eight weeks ago. He still is off work, weak and tires so easily. We both live in fear of another attack. I'm hoping with proper care, a proper diet, and rest he will live a long life.

I have heard you have a book on food and diets with recipes. This is a whole new world to me, and I need all the help I can get. The book store here does not have the book. Please tell me how to get one as I want to do everything I can to help my husband regain his health.

Dear Reader — Your husband is fortunate to have a wife who wants to make the extra effort necessary to help him. It's true that you need help to plan meals that are low in fat, low in cholesterol and designed to prevent heart and vascular disease. It is well and good to tell a patient he needs to do these things, but you can't do it very well without some guidelines. To limit the fat calories in the diet to 35 per cent of the calories consumed you need to be able to know how much fat in calories, not grams, is in the food you eat. The book includes a listing of almost all common foods and their values in calories, plus the recipes you mentioned. It is designed for people like you. You can get it by ordering it direct. Write to The Viking Press, 625 Madison Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10022, and ask for my book, "What You Need to Know About Food and Cooking for Health" (price $10.00).

It is good to follow such a plan after a heart attack, but I would be much happier if people would follow these principles before they get sick. A good program can go a long way toward preventing a heart attack in the first place.

Dear Dr. Lamb — Please tell me what to do about leg cramps. Sometimes at night a cramp occurs in the calf of my left leg. Nothing relieves it but to get ouf of bed and walk around.

Dear Reader — It is best to prevent them and to do that it is helpful to know what is causing them. Some of them are from poor circulation to the legs. If the problem of circulated is bad enough then in selected cases surgery is indicated. A detour around a blocked artery can improve the situation remarkably.

In other instances there is a problem in circulation stimulated by smoking cigarettes. The cramps are a symptom of this problem. Certainly it is important to receive good treatment for this and, of course, to stop smoking.

Some people are helped by taking calcium. A high percentage of the American population has a dietary deficiency of calcium.

Many leg cramps are not related to any real disease or problem the doctor can define. If you keep the legs warm it will help a lot in preventing the cramps. Many of my readers have reported success by wearing good, warm socks to bed. If you have cramps in the summer months wear them to bed than also. A warm blanket or any means used to keep those feet and legs warm at night seems to work wonders. But, if you have lots of trouble or keeping them warm doesn't help, then I really think you should have an examination to be sure you don't have a problem with your circulation to your legs.

Mutual fund prospects brighter

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Times have taken a decided turn for the better in the last few months for the troubled mutual fund industry.

As the statistics clearly spell out, the credit goes to the glittering early success of the industry's newest product — the short term money market fund.

In the six-month period from March 1 to Aug. 31, investors have poured over $600 million more into the money market funds than they have taken out, according to the Investment Company Institute.

The March figure was $16.2 million. By August, it had swollen to $228.8 million.

Harry J. Guinivan, the institute's associate director, points out that that data includes only the nine money market funds which are members of the trade group.

Not included, for example, is the largest of all the money market funds, New York's Reserve Fund, which issued its first public shares in January 1973, and had grown to $366 million in net assets at the last count.

Guinivan estimates the number of such funds has reached 15 to 20 from only a handful at the start of this year.

"They're coming out so rapidly it's hard to keep track of them," he observes.

The funds invest in a sector of the financial world that few small investors took much notice of until recently, when double-digit interest rates suddenly thrust it into the spotlight.

In this market, big businesses, banks and the government issue and trade interest-bearing securities that resemble bonds, except that they mature in a few days, weeks or months instead of 20 or 30 or 40 years.

A traditional bar to small investors wanting to invest in these vehicles — Treasury bills, bank certificates of deposit, commercial paper issued by industry, and the like — has been the large minimum amount of capital required.

Treasury bills, for instance, generally require a minimum of $10,000, although one issue this summer was offered in $1,000 units. Certificates of deposit ordinarily start at $100,000.

What the funds do, of course, is to pool the money of investors, and thus they can offer access to the short term money market for starting minimum investments ranging from $5,000 to as little as $100 in a couple of cases.

People in the industry acknowledge the popularity of the money market funds almost certainly will fade quickly should interest rates come down to any significant extent.

Lower interest rates might well be accompanied by a better stock market, however. The question then for the fund industry would be whether it could attract once-burned investors back into common-stock funds.

Hunza loses independence

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) — The tiny landlocked mountain kingdom of Hunza, which claims to be the original Shangri La, has lost its last vestige of independence and become part of Pakistan.

Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto of Pakistan announced the merger during a tour of tribal areas along the Pakistan-China border.

Pakistan "is one and cannot afford to have states within a state," Bhutto said. "It belongs to the peasants and the workers, not to nawabs and mirs (princes and kings). We have no enmity for any individual, but we have to end the reactionary system and run the country according to our mandate."

Home Minister Abdul Qayuum Khan said the merger was effective immediately, and officials from the Pakistani government had been sent to take over the administration.

The merger ends 900 years of benevolent feudalism for Hunza and retires the state's 65-year-old ruling mir, Lt. Gen. Jamal Khan, on a pension.

The tranquil life of Hunza, the longevity of its people and their apparently idyllic way of life are said to have inspired James Hilton's novel "Lost Horizon."

But the world has been steadily moving in on Hunza since the partition of India and the withdrawal of the British in 1947. Since then, the mir has been reduced to little more than a figurehead with responsibility only for resolving local disputes according to custom.

Changes in diet and disease resulting from increased contact with the outside world have sharply reduced the number of people living past the age of 100.

Pakistan plans to open up the state as a tourist center.

Kissinger said ready to work on Cyprus problem

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger has told Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko that he is ready to play an active part in resolving the Cyprus crisis.

Kissinger held separate meetings Tuesday with the foreign ministers of Greece and Turkey and then discussed the sessions with Gromyko at dinner Tuesday night.

Informed sources said Gromyko reiterated his government's proposal for an 18-nation conference on Cyprus. But the sources said Kissinger would press ahead with his own personal attempt to get the Greeks and Turks into negotiations on the future of the war-torn island.

Kissinger and Gromyko also discussed prospects for a Middle East settlement and the American's plans to visit Moscow late next Monday for negotiations on the limitation of nuclear arms.

State Department spokesman Robert Anderson said the question of more Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union did not come up.

There had been speculation that Kissinger's meeting with the Greek and Turkish ministers would set the stage for some Cypriot peacemaking during his visit to the Middle East in October.

But Greek Foreign Minister George Mavros told newsmen: "If the secretary wants to go to Ankara it might be useful, but Athens is not the place" for his personal diplomacy since "it is Turkish aggression" that is the problem.

However, he did agree to see Kissinger again Sunday evening when the secretary of state returns to New York for more meetings with foreign ministers attending the United Nations General Assembly.

As Kissinger stood smiling beside him, Mavros said they talked "in a very friendly atmosphere." After the Turkish invasion of Cyprus in July, the Greek government accused the U.S. government of favoring the Turks, and Mavros rejected an invitation to come to Washington for peace talks.

He also had some unusually conciliatory words for Israel, saying: "The Soviet Union stands in favor of Israel existing and developing as an independent sovereign state." But he warned Israel against holding on to Arab territories captured in the 1967 war and called for speedy resumption of the Arab-Israeli peace conference in Geneva with the Palestinians taking their "rightful place" in the negotiations.

Tax revision measure is reported in trouble

By CARL C. CRAFT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — If this year's big tax bill survives heavy cross-fire in Congress, many average Americans will get a tax cut while oilmen will see an old tax-saving friend, the depletion allowance, slowly die.

But all sides in the tax bill battle agree that's an extremely big "if," because the legislation is in trouble. Friends are having a tough time finding and keeping a consensus, while some strange-bedfellow enemies may just gang up and kill it quickly.

As the bill presently stands after many months of voting by the House Ways and Means Committee, but with many controversial items subject to change before the panel's final decisions in the next few weeks, chief provisions would:

—Hike taxes for the oil industry, mainly by phasing out the percentage depletion allowance that has been a fixture in tax law since the 1920s and which saves petroleum producers $2 billion to $3 billion a year in federal taxes.

—Cut taxes for many individuals by increasing the maximum standard deduction from $2,000 to $2,500; by boosting the minimum standard deduction that benefits low-income persons from $1,300 to $1,400 for singles and $1,500 fo couples; and by creating a new "simplification" deduction of up to $650 for people who itemize.

—Benefit some upper-bracket taxpayers through a change that would extend to some unearned income, such as dividends and rents, the maximum 50 per cent tax rate that now applies to earned income such as salaries. Some unearned income may now be taxed at up to 70 per cent.

—Curb tax shelters, especially in the real estate field where these are extensively used by investors.

—Create a new minimum tax on the rich, which would be an alternate tax to be paid only if the liability is larger than the wealthy person's regular taxes due.

—Ease taxes on capital gains, meaning profits from sales of assets such as securities or real estate held a certain length of time.

Over-all, staff experts said it will be next week before firm estimates on the revenue gains and losses for the Treasury are ready for presentation to the committee. But they guess there would be a net $400 million gain for the government when the bill's features take effect.

Committee Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., is pushing to get a bill passed by the House before the planned mid-October recess for the November elections. But the committee is deeply split over the major features such as the proposed boost in oil industry taxes.

Still pending are moves to reconsider such things as the new minimum tax on the wealthy, and a suggestion that a way be provided so that no federal taxes would have to be paid by a head of a household earning up to $3,200, or by others on a scale ranging to a married couple with four children and annual earnings of $6,500.

Conflict-of-interest guidelines not enforced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Power Commission Chairman John N. Nassikas says conflict-of-interest rules have not been enforced on officials of the agency for at least the past four years.

He acknowledged on Wednesday that at least 19 commission officials have technically violated the conflict-of-interest rules, but he said an investigation has found no real conflict affecting their regulatory activities.

Nassikas testified before a special House subcommittee on investigations looking into a General Accounting Office report alleging serious problems in the commission. The report said that for years the commission has not adequately enforced its own rules against officials owning stock in companies affected by commission regulation.

Even the officials responsible for reviewing financial statements of commission employes failed to file their own statements.

Nassikas accepted responsibility for the failure, but he said the regulations had been ignored even before he became chairman and before Claudius Fike became director of personnel programs in 1971.

However, he emphasized that neither the GAO nor the commission's internal investigations so far have uncovered "any violations of ethical standards in using public office for private gain, giving preferential treatment to any organization or person, losing complete dependence or impartiality of action and affecting adversely the confidence of the public in government integrity."

The officials still under commission investigation were identified only by job titles, including seven administrative law judges, among them the chief judge, Joseph Zwerdling.

Corn damage estimated

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Up to 300 million bushels of corn were destroyed by frost in the Midwest this past weekend, according to an American Farm Bureau agronomist.

Warren Collins also predicted that the 1974 crop yield will be far below the latest U.S. Department of Agriculture forecast.

Collins said Wednesday that this year's corn harvest will be between 4.6 billion and 4.7 billion bushels, about a billion less than the record 1973 yield of 5.64 billion bushels.

The latest Agriculture Department estimate was for a corn harvest of 4.995 billion bushels.

Freezing temperatures destroyed 1 to 2 per cent of the crop in northern Illinois, he said, about 4 per cent in Iowa and up to 15 per cent in Wisconsin.

University of Illinois agronomists also reported Wednesday that the frost killed all corn and soybean plants north of Interstate 80 in Illinois. Yields were cut in proportion to the maturity of the plants, said Derreld Mulvaney, UI agronomist at DeKalb.

"Only one third of the soybeans were mature enough not to be affected by the frost," Mulvaney said. The others, he said, "will have beans smaller than normal and some will be off-color."

About 60 per cent of the corn crop, Mulvaney said, was mature enough to be out of frost danger, having been planted before the wet weather which began May 7.

New state forest planned

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Missouri Conservation Commission plans to purchase a 1,064-acre tract of timbered land on the Missouri River bluffs between St. Joseph and Kansas City for use as a state forest.

The area is one of the last large blocks of timber remaining in northwestern Missouri.

The land will be bought with federal revenue sharing funds provided by the last session of the Missouri Legislature upon the recommendation of Gov. Christopher S. Bond.

Funds were provided specifically for public forests in northwestern Missouri.

State Forester Osal Capps said the tract, which may be called Bluffwoods, will be managed for nature study, forest-related recreation and as a demonstration forest.

Bluffwoods, 12 miles south of St. Joseph and 25 miles from Kansas City near the town of Halls, is between U.S. 59 and Interstate 29 and will be accessible by county roads.

Capps said the tract will be open to public use sometime next year after the land purchase is complete and signs are posted.

Sentenced, fined in funds case

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. (AP) — Truman Altenbaumer of Hot Springs has been sentenced to one year in prison with six months suspended and fined $1,000 for his part in misapplying funds of an Arkansas bank.

Altenbaumer, a former executive secretary of the state Republican party, was sentenced in U.S. District Court. He is a former director of the Bank of Glenwood and the Pike County Bank at Murfreesboro.

He pleaded guilty July 8 to three misdemeanor charges of misapplication, but U.S. District Court Judge Oren Harris of El Dorado dismissed two of the charges and sentenced Altenbaumer on one count of misapplying funds while he was a director of the Pike County bank.

Hilmon Duke of Glenwood, a former executive of both the Glenwood and Pike County banks, and Larry Ball of Hot Springs, who held several executive positions at the Glenwood bank, also were sentenced by Harris this week.

Duke was fined $10,000 after pleading guilty to one felony count of conspiring to misapply bank funds. He was given 15 days to pay the fine.

Ball, who pleaded guilty to two misdemeanor charges when Altenbaumer did, was given a one-year suspended prison sentence on each count and fined $1,000.

The world's highest measured sand dunes are those on the Saharan sand sea of IsaouaneN-Tiferine of east central Algeria at Latitude 26 42N, Longitude 6 43 E. They have a wave length of nearly three miles and attain a height of 1,410 feet.

Committee removes trade bill obstacle

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee has removed a major obstacle to approval of a trade bill by agreeing on benefits for workers whose jobs are lost because of imports.

A plan approved Wednesday would allow an eligible worker to receive up to 70 per cent of his average weekly wage, to a maximum of $170, in addition to unemployment-compensation benefits already paid by the states.

Another obstacle to adoption of the bill is the dispute over denying the Soviet Union trade concessions until free emigration of Russian minorities is assured. However, the committee has allowed Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., to negotiate with the Ford administration over terms of the Soviet concession and apparently will accept whatever compromise Jackson works out.

The Senate committee is expected to complete work on the trade bill by mid-October.

Rejects oil price reduction

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Shah of Iren rejected today President Ford's call for reduced oil prices. He called on the industrial nations to cut the prices of their exports first.

The shah, one of the leaders in the drive to increase oil revenues for the producing countries, told newsmen in Canberra, Australia, "No one can dictate to us. No one can wave a finger at us, because we will wave a finger back.

The shah said the Middle East oil countries are prepared to fix a world price for oil if it could be related to an index of 20 to 30 commodity prices.

"If world prices go down, we will go down with oil prices," he said. "But if they go up, why should we pay the bill?" he said.

He claimed that severe inflationary problems began before oil prices rose last year, and that oil prices still contribute only 1 to 1.5 per cent to world inflation. The only real solution is for people to realize "they must just work a little harder," he said.

In Vienna, Abderrahman Khene of Algeria, secretary-general of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, said oil prices may rise again next year at the same rate as inflation.

Khene said his organization's financial experts will meet on Oct. 23 to review the price situation. If they decide the world rate of inflation is likely to be 12 per cent, it is "conceivable" they would recommend raising prices next year by 1 per cent a month.

Khene denied a Beirut newspaper report that the oil nations were planning a 12 per cent hike on Jan. 1.

Venezuela Mines Minister Valentin Hernandez said the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries might hold a special meeting soon to discuss Ford's speech.

The French government announced it will cut back France's 1975 oil imports by 10 per cent. A government spokesman said petroleum imports would be limited to $10.1 billion, the same amount that is being spent this year. But at current prices, France will get 10 per cent less for its money than it has been getting.

Canadian officials denied reports that their government was considering following the lead of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries by ordering an increase of 35 cents a barrel in the export tax on crude oil shipped to the United States. The current tax is $5.20 a barrel.

THEY'VE GOT THIEVES DOWN ON THE FARM

DES MOINES (AP) Thieves have hit one out of every five Iowa farmers within the past three years, according to a poll conducted by Wallaces Farmer, one of the nation's oldest rural publications.

The magazine's pollsters asked the following question of 477 Iowa farm men and women: "Have you been a victim of theft within the last three years?" Twenty per cent replied yes. Heading the list of things stolen were fuel, livestock, machinery and tools.

Also, the poll showed that thieves tended to pick their targets from the wealthier farmers. Of farmers with less than $10,000 yearly income, 17 per cent reported farm thefts. Of those who earned $40,000 or more, 25 per cent reported thefts.

Getting caught by Watergate an expensive problem

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A retired film producer on the West Coast is trying to raise $400,000 for H. R. Haldeman's legal expenses. A New York law firm submits a $471,390 bill for defending John N. Mitchell. Another lawyer claims he is owed $114,500 and he is suing for it.

Three examples out of dozens, all proving the same thing: Innocent or guilty, the cost of being a Watergate defendant is staggering.

A lawyer representing one of the six defendants in next month's Watergate cover-up trial was asked to estimate the likely cost of that trial to the accused and the government.

"Several million dollars," he said without hesitation.

To date nearly 50 individuals have been charged with crimes lumped loosely under the Watergate umbrella. Probably 50 others were — or thought they were — under investigation. Most hired lawyers.

More than a dozen corporations pleaded guilty to campaign finance law violations and paid fines of $1,000 to $20,000. Their lawyers, safe to say, cost more than the fines.

Even the most talkative defense attorney will fall silent when he is asked about his fees. But he'll hint at what the other guy charges.

The caliber of attorneys makes it certain that one bill less than $75-100 an hour and the senior partner in a prestigious firm will charge $250. During a trial he may spend six hours a day in court and another four preparing for the next day.

That's $2,500 a day. With the trial expected to last three months — 60 court days — that comes to an even $150,000, win or lose.

But a trial is only a waystop in a long road.

In his last days as Nixon's chief of staff, Haldeman hired 73-year-old John J. Wilson and Frank H. Strickler to represent him. Their reputations are towering and so, presumably, are their fees.

They sat with Haldeman through three days before the Senate Watergate committee, more days in his interviews with the staff, more when he appeared before grand juries, more at his indictment and numerous conferences in court and chambers.

Z. Wayne Griffin, a friend of the Haldeman family, heads his defense fund.

"The amount we think is necessary is about $400,000," he said. "I can't tell you how much we've received so far."

Wilson and Strickler also represented former Nixon aide John Ehrlichman at first, but after his indictment had to step out because of a potential conflict of interest with Haldeman's defense.

Ehrlichman hired the law firm of William S. Frates of Miami, whose clients include Nixon friend Charles G. (Bebe) Rebozo. Frates not only employed two Washington attorneys for the team, but also maintains an $85-a-day hotel suite in the capital for an associate who spends weeks at a time there.

Seattle attorney David J. Willams is the managing trustee of Ehrlichman's defense fund, created last December. In May, officials said Ehrlichman needed $150,000. Now, Williams said, Ehrlichman figures he'll need $300,000 to pay for all criminal and civil suits and appeals.

Frates headed Ehrlichman's defense team in the two-week Plumbers' trial in which the former Nixon lieutenant was convicted for conspiracy to violate the civil rights of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist and two counts of perjury. The appeal from that conviction and a sentence of 20 to 60 months are in progress while Ehrlichman prepares to go on trial on cover-up charges.

In addition, Ehrlichman has legal expenses in Los Angeles where he remains charged with perjury.

Sources familiar with the Ehrlichman legal defense fund say that only $50,000 has been raised and much of that was in the early stages.

Mitchell and former Secretary of Commerce Maurice H. Stans went through a 48-day trial in New York before being acquitted of charges in the Vesco case.

Stans' legal bill was $380,793; Mitchell's $393,346 plus $79,044 expenses.

It was paid, or will be soon, by the trust fund handling the money left in the coffers of Richard Nixon's 1972 re-election committee.

The committee, at latest report, had spent or owed $1.9 million total in legal costs, plus another $775,000 to settle a lawsuit from the Democratic National Committee stemming from the Watergate break-in.

Mitchell and Stans were the top people in the Nixon re-election organization. But Haldeman and Ehrlichman, who were not on the payroll of the Committee for the Re-Election of the President, have no such financial umbrella.

★ ★ ★

For their money, the defendants get the kind of legal help seldom available to the average American.

Last May 1, when pre-trial motions were due in both the cover-up and Plumbers' cases, lawyers for the 11 individuals then involved filed a total of 48 motions, some running 70 pages or more. The stack was more than two feet high.

Behind each was research into hundreds of precedent cases to guide the judge. Most of the motions were rejected, as the lawyers knew they would be. But they went through the legal acrobatics on the gamble that a misstep by the judge would provide grounds for appeal, and maybe overturn of a sentence yet to come.

It's called "building the record," a luxury only the well-heeled can afford.

Watergate lawyers say the government is at an advantage in preparing cases.

"Where they really have you outgunned is not how many lawyers they have — and they have plenty — but the investigative manpower at their disposal," says a cover-up defendant's lawyer who once worked in the Justice Department.

Some of the better-known names in Watergate have tried to keep afloat by writing books, hoping a hit can defray some of the costs. Jeb Stuart Magruder, currently serving a 10 months to 4 year prison sentence, probably has come closest to that goal.

James W. McCord Jr., whose lawyers have managed to keep him out of jail through appeals, has written the first of several books. E. Howard Hunt Jr., is out with a new one.

The bills to the taxpayer are also high. Millions were spent by the Senate Watergate committee and the House Judiciary Committee.

Special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski has 36 lawyers on his staff, plus 48 clerical, administrative and computer people. Salaries run $1.8 million a year. Other expenses total another million.

The government attorneys' salaries range from $38,000 a year for Jaworski to $17,500 for the most junior attorney, an average of $28,000.

For those defendants who have no fund-raising going, there is another way out — declaring themselves paupers and thus, with court approval, avoiding at least the expenses involved in filings to the court. Bernard L. Baker and Eugenio R. Martinez, convicted in both the Watergate break-in and Plumbers' cases, went that route.

Legal bills have been run up by many who have not been accused of anything. Lawrence M. Higby, a middle-level White House employe, spent $10,000 during the Watergate investigations. Some others have paid twice that amount to lawyers. For others the sums have been less than $50.

And no one can estimate the legal fees facing the most famous of the 18 unindicted co-conspirators in the Watergate cover-up case, Richard M. Nixon.

India's wheat level low and falling

By LONDON ECONOMIST NEWS SERVICE

NEW DELHI — It is not quite a famine situation, but it is very nasty. India is girding itself for another bad autumn harvest because of drought in some states and floods in others.

If the rains fall in the right places over the next four critical weeks, about 2 million additional tons of grain might be saved. But the total is expected to be not much more than 60 million tons, which is 10 per cent less than last year when India had 13 million fewer people to feed.

Because India's food reserves are now negligible, a bad harvest automatically means a food deficit unless the difference can be made up by imports.

Earlier this year the government thought it could scrape through with 9 million tons, even though last year the system barely functioned with 11.5 million tons. This could have been done only by reducing the numbers eligible for a ration, perhaps by leaving rural areas to fend for themselves.

But now Prime Minister Indira Gandhi is aiming for the 11 million tons distributed last year. Her problem is how to beg, borrow or buy yet another 2 million tons with wheat prices high and world reserves low.

India is now claiming a share in the emergency fund whch the United Nations hopes to mobilize to help the countries hit hardest by oil price rises. This is said to be why Indian envoys are discussing their grain requirements in Washington; the United States is expected to be one of the chief donors of grain to the UN fund.

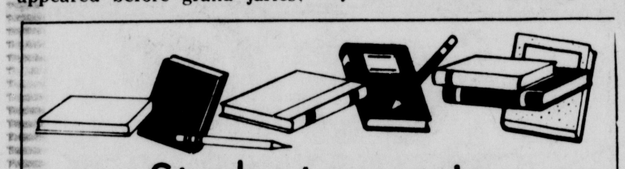

A bad harvest can always be blamed on the weather and Indians are duly doing so. But India's agricultural problems go well beyond a few erratic monsoons.

The green revolution has lost its momentum because of administrative failures over a wide front. Low productivity in state-run factories has caused a shortage of both fertilizer and quality seeds. The development of new strains of wheat has fallen behind, aggravating the incidence of pests and diseases in the one crop which had, until recently, proved the promise of the "miracle" seeds.

But the government continues to neglect long-term solutions — sustained research, for instance — in favor of instant remedies such as changes in the distribution system.

Mrs. Gandhi is under considerable pressure from the left to renationalize the wheat trade after the failure of the part-state, part-private trading system that was introduced this year. But she knows that, with the general price level rising by 2 or 3 per cent a month, farmers cannot be expected to part with their produce except at a price much higher than the one set by the government at this time last year.

If she does raise the purchase price for wheat, however, she will either have to raise the price charged by ration shops or increase state subsidies. So she may well opt to continue the unhappy compromise between state and private trading.

'Moon people' religion latest wrinkle to sweep across U.S.

EDITOR'S NOTE: After a controversial visit to New York City, a Korean evangelist, the Rev. Sun Myung Moon, has moved his million-dollar religious road show on to Philadelphia. Before-Christmas stops are scheduled at six other major U.S. cities. This story is about one of Moon's young American followers.

By PETER ARNETT
AP Special Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — "He's a Moon puppet!"

The mother's voice sounded bitterly unhappy. She had seen her son Tom Grabowski only once in two years and had been trying to phone him in New York City. But Tom was not available.

Not available to relatives either this past week were hundreds of other young people. They had assembled here with the avowed purpose of promoting a Korean evangelist named the Rev. Sun Myung Moon in skeptical New York.

So insistent was their poster, street-corner and television campaign that Madison Square Garden was filled to capacity to hear the Rev. Moon repudiate traditional Christian teachings and virtually proclaim himself the new messiah.

Similar campaigns will inundate Philadelphia, Washington D.C., Atlanta, Chicago, Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angles before the year ends.

Religious leaders grow apopletic discussing the Moon people's religious philosophy, classifying it as the latest wrinkle in the myriad of offbeat religions that periodically sweep America.

The heretical Moon view of the Bible is that God did not intend for Jesus Christ to be crucified to atone for man's sin. It was all a ghastly mistake, and a new messiah will arrive soon to finish the job.

★ ★ ★

Hundreds of young Americans seem willing to believe this and lay their life savings on the line to prove it. Moon's Unification Church claims 20,000 American members, average age 23. One of these membe , Tom Grabowski, paid $4,150 of savings and salary in the first few months of his Moon membership.

"The Rev. Moon is leading Tom down the garden path," said his mother who lives in the west side of Chicago. "I've had tickets to some of his rallies but I have torn them up. If I go I know I'll stand up and demand my son back."

Other parents are speaking out as Moon's publicity campaign moves into full gear across the country. They charge that Moon's church deliberately alienates youths from their families, and insists on their asceticism, while senior church members live lives of luxury.

Tom Grabowski was outside the Public Library on Fifth Avenue two days before Moon Madison Square Garden cru-

Tom, tall and goodlooking, was enthusiastically handing out red, white and blue leaflets bearing the smiling face of the Rev. Moon and titled, "September 18th Could be your Re-Birthday." That was the date of the New York rally.

★ ★ ★

Tom quickly agreed to be interviewed, readily admitting that his mother was concerned about his activities. But the interview would not be alone. "There are always two of us together," said an elder member of the group outside the library.

During a lunch of hot dogs in a nearby park it turned out that Tom was part of the eight-member South Carolina team working out of Columbia, S.C. They had been summoned to New York to assist in the campaign.

They were staying at a downtown Manhattan hotel that they declined to identify "because of security." Most of the conversation was dominated by an older team member, who said he was a former candidate for the Roman Catholic priesthood.

But later in the afternoon this reporter managed to get Tom alone in a Madison Avenue coffee shop. He talked freely about his upbringing in a Polish neighborhood in Chicago, his restlessness after he graduated from a Catholic high school at 16, his enlistment in the army at 18 and assignment to Thailand with a top secret clearance in the Army Security Agency.

Back home at Ft. Jackson, S.C., last year "I was looking for something, I don't know what." He met some Moon movement members, and soon agreed to turn over his Army pay checks to the cause. He turned over 10 monthly checks of $325 each until his discharge in March this year when he joined the movement fulltime.

Tom also sold his stereo equipment to give an additional $500, and withdrew $300 from a bank account of $1,500 that he had accumulated years earlier, and gave it to the movement: a total of $4,150.

It was then that his mother stepped in.

"I have his bank book, and I will not allow him to give another penny to the Moon people," she said. "There is $1,200 left, and he must have something to fall back on."

His mother says she is concerned less about his money than her son's health. "I know now that Tom is doing what he wants to do, but I do not believe that the Moon people are as concerned about him as I am.

"They eat poorly, they live in poverty."

Tom seemed proud of his frugality. "Sure we eat simply, and live simply. There are four of us to a hotel room here. We have been eating mainly cheese sandwiches all week, and hamburgers. And at Columbia we live commune-style, and need to do a lot of work on the house."

Tom seemed to see little inconsistency in eating at a Burger King on Lexington Avenue one evening, getting every centsworth of the less than $2 the group spent on food each day, while just seven blocks away the Rev. Moon was entertaining 1,650 guests to a free dinner at the Waldorf Astoria that cost $25 a head.

★ ★ ★

Nor was Tom perturbed to know that the Rev. Moon lived grandly in a mansion on the 26-acre East Garden estate in Irvington, N.Y., purchased last year for a reported $650,000, along with $50,000 worth of its antiques. This while Tom and his South Carolina team lived in a broken down house on the wrong side of the tracks in Columbia.

Much of the Rev. Moon's money reportedly comes from industrial holdings in South Korea.

The South Carolina team keeps detailed books, entering even cokes purchased on the streets to slake their thirst. The books are sent monthly to the movement's headquarters.

Tom said his normal activities are aimed at gaining new recruits, fulltime workers like himself who devote themselves to spreading the word of Moon.

To spearhead his current cross-country campaign, Moon called upon hundreds of members like Tom to fund-raise and promote his appearances. They are a formidable, highly organized and dedicated group.

Tom agreed to talk again the following day, but it was not to be. Word of the interview had gotten out to higher headquarters, and Tom said next morning he was not permitted to speak.

A protest to the movement headquarters, which insists the Moon church is open to press scrutiny, brought the promise of an interview the morning after the Madison Square Garden Crusade. But not only was Tom not at the interview, neither was anything else. The Church headquarters on Fifth Avenue was completely deserted.

A doorman told this reporter, "They moved themselves and 40 pieces of furniture out early this morning."

Voter registration in county above average

Pettis County is ahead of the state average in registered voters. County Clerk Mary Jane Wilson said 67.4 per cent of the county's eligible voters are on the books, while the statewide average is 67.2 per cent.

As of July 30 Mrs. Wilson said the county had 16,129 registered voters out of a population of about 34,000. She said the number of eligible voters in the county would be two-thirds of the population.

Mrs. Wilson also has another 155 late registration cards in a "hold" box. These cards will be added to the registration list now that the junior college election is over.

The deadline for registering for the Nov. 5 general election is Oct. 9.

Mrs. Wilson said one problem is that many persons are still unaware of the state law requiring voters to be registered.

Missouri Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick is urging Missourians to register for the November election. Kirkpatrick said with only two weeks left before the deadline about 30 per cent of the eligible voters in the state are not registered.

Commission to intervene in EPA case

KANSAS CITY (AP)–Because Missouri and federal air pollution standards are the same, the Air Conservation Commission has voted to intervene in a federal case in which Union Electric Co. of St. Louis is challenging the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Commissioners, in a meeting in Kansas City Wednesday, seemed to feel the state's authority to regulate emissions from power plant smokestacks is under attack.

In a petition filed Aug. 20 in the U.S. Court of Appeals in St. Louis, the utility asked the court to throw out part of the metropolitan St. Louis code concerning sulphur dioxide, a by-product of generating plants.

The power company's case against the EPA is buttressed by claims for exemption from sulphur dioxide standards, among them the actual health hazard and the cost of suitable fuels and anitpollution equipment.

Walter W. Nowotny Jr., assistant attorney general and counsel for the commission, said Missouri should join the EPA "because this is a challenge to our regulations."

In its motion to join the federal agency, the commission states a ruling against sulphur dioxide regulations "would, as a practical matter, foreclose" future enforcement efforts by the commission.

The court must agree to allow the state agency to join as a defendant but Notwotny said, "we fully expect to be allowed to intervene."

Government probe yields guilty plea

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP)—The government's investigation of large scale corruption in contract bidding in the East St. Louis area yielded its first guilty plea Wednesday when Brooklyn, Ill. Mayor George R. Thomas admitted extorting $4,000 in kickbacks from three contractors.

Thomas, 57, pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court and was released on a $1,000 recognizance bond. Federal Judge James L. Foreman delayed sentencing pending further investigation.

A federal grand jury began a massive investigation Sept. 17 into an alleged system of kickbacks involving public officials and contractors in St. Clair County. The system allegedly involves bid rigging, extortion and shakedowns in connection with local government projects in supply and repair contracts.

—Nearly 100 witness and record subpoenas on eight local government agencies, political and governmental leaders and major contractors were issued by the grand jury.

Thomas has been mayor of Brooklyn since 1961. The small community is located just north of East St. Louis.

Message for SFCC

After four bond issue defeats in five years, the message for State Fair Community College seems clear: there will be no additional tax revenues for capital improvements, at least not in the foreseeable future. While we may disagree with the wisdom of this verdict, we are prepared to accept it, and SFCC might as well also.

Fortunately, the college is not without alternatives. The $2.3 million Yeater bequest can be used to at least get a start on a permanent campus, and this should be done. As much sense as it made financially, SFCC must accept the fact that it is not in a position to have its cake and eat it too insofar as this money is concerned.

Construction of permanent academic facilities on the campus, even on a limited scale, will give SFCC a psychological boost. It will provide something tangible for residents to see and admire, and will begin to reverse the "temporary" image that has been associated with the college for the past six years. It would also be conducive to encouraging future capital improvements, if the economic climate improves.

In the meantime, SFCC—like most Americans—will have to tighten its belt and make do with what it has, recognizing that many other community colleges would be delighted to have that $2.3 million as a gift.

The USDA's tent show

Your federal Department of Agriculture is considering hitting the road with a traveling tent show to convince you that food prices aren't all that high and that you really never had it so good.

The Associated Press got its hands on a draft of something called the "American Food Forum," which the USDA envisions as an opportunity to criss-cross the nation with audio-visual displays, recorded hymns of thanksgiving and other techniques to educate consumers and burnish the department's image in the process.

With food prices having gone up something like 30 per cent in the last two years, we doubt that the USDA can summon up enough Madison Avenue tricks to convince the consumer that it's all a figment of his imagination.

In the public relations business, sometimes doing nothing is the best policy. The USDA might find this the wisest course of action.

"HEY, KISSINGER! WHERE ARE YOU?"

Taking another look at Chile-ITT link

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Was International Telephone and Telegraph (ITT) behind the U. S. effort to undermine the late Salvador Allende's government in Chile? Consider these curious coincidences:

✔ On March 21, 1972, we reported that the CIA and ITT had been "plotting together to create economic chaos in Chile, hoping this would cause the Chilean army to pull a coup ..." The CIA spend $8 million, most of it on economic sabotage, to weaken Allende's government. The coup came exactly 18 months after we reported the CIA-ITT scheme.

✔ Even before Allende took office, we also reported, ITT sent a secret message to Henry Kissinger urging American action to stop Allende. The Marxist leader had won Chile's election by a plurality, not a majority. Under the constitution, therefore, the Chilean Congress would make the final choice between Allende and the second highest vote-getter. The CIA passed out $350,000 to bribe members of the Chilean Congress to vote against Allende.

✔ ITT's links with the CIA were unusually strong. John McCone, a former CIA director, had become an ITT director. Among the ITT documents, which we uncovered, was an Oct. 9, 1970, report to McCone on Chile declaring: "Approaches continue to be made to select members of the armed forces in an attempt to have them lead some sort of uprising — no success to date."

✔ Edward Korry, the former U. S. ambassador to Chile, operated the U. S. embassy virtually as a branch office for ITT. The ITT documents in our possession show he described his anti-Allende activities to ITT's director of international relations, J. D. Neal. Korry's reports to ITT often were more candid than his reports to the State Department.

✔ While working behind the scenes with ITT against Allende, Korry spoke to Allende about a deal to pay off ITT and two copper companies in U.S.-guaranteed Chilean bonds. Under this plan, the United States would have had to make good on the bonds and would have wound up paying ITT a whopping $90 million. But Allende turned down the deal, according to Korry, for "ideological reasons."

✔ We wrote a series of columns in March, 1972, describing how the CIA and ITT had conspired together to promote Chile's economic collapse. Kissinger personally assured us, however, that the scheme had never been carried out. On his word, we wrote that the plan received a "cool reception from the White House and State Department." Now we learn that Kissinger, after telling us this, approved additional CIA expenditures to undermine the Chilean economy. The last million was approved as late as August, 1973, only a month before the coup.

We also reported on March 30, 1972, the reasons that the CIA wanted to eliminate Allende. We wrote that Allende had permitted Cuba's Fidel Castro to turn his embassy in Santiago, Chile, into "the principal Cuban center for support of Latin-American liberation movements."

The CIA had reliable information that the Soviet KGB was using the Cuban DGI intelligence network to promote communism and undermine democracy in Latin America. This had been reported to the hush-hush 40 Committee, which approved the covert CIA activities against Allende.

Meanwhile, we turned our files over to Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, whose Senate subcommittee scolded both the CIA and ITT for their bizarre plottings. But because U. S. officials lied under oath to the subcommittee, Church was never able to get to the bottom of the affair. We would still like to know what role ITT played in manipulating U. S. foreign policy.

WATCH ON WASTE: The Army is buying 551 dump trucks, which are too weighty and too wide for most highways. Their giant tires, moreover, begin burning up after 90 minutes on the road.

The Army wound up with this mechanical Frankenstein because the brass hats insisted on installing an automatic transmission never before used in dump trucks.

After two years of testing, the designers decided the truck needed a second transmission, which made it too heavy. The Army aggravated the problem by demanding thicker steel, which made it not only too heavy but too wide for many roads.

Even on highways that were wide enough, the trucks had to stop for half an hour every 90 minutes to cool off the tires. Under a full load at 40 miles an hour, the tires began to burn up after 90 minutes.

A horrified Deputy Assistant Secretary Joseph Zengerle warned in an internal memo about "the embarrassment to the Army if we purchase a truck which cannot satisfy the specified load-carrying requirements."

Yet despite his warning, the Army began ordering trucks without fully testing the first model. Result: the taxpayers are committed to pay $16 million for 551 trucks and the cost could go as high as $29 million.

The Army, in a two-page defense of the goof-ridden vehicle, said the Vietnam experience indicated automatic transmissions were cost effective. The early re-ordering was done, therefore, to save money.

The tests, said the Army, were "successful." The truck was "rugged" and its defects were "more apparent than real." As for the tires, a 90-minute break was standard for such dumpers, said the Army. "The tire cooling when placed in perspective is no problem."

A conservative view

Senate, not Ford, flunked

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — Before it was taken, last week's Senate vote on a federal pay raise was widely described as President Ford's first big test on Capitol Hill. They called the roll up yonder, and Ford lost two-to-one. The Star-News called it a "stinging defeat." The Post called it a "resounding defeat."

But Michigan's Sen. Robert Griffin had a different view. It wasn't a test of the President, he said. It was a test of the Senate. And the Senate flunked.

The issue involved a pay raise scheduled to go into effect on Oct. 1. Ford ordered the raise postponed to Jan. 1, but the law permits such a presidential suspension to be overturned by either house of Congress. The Senate voted its resolution of disapproval by 64-35. The raise, expected to average 5.5 per cent, will go into effect as scheduled.

Ford had two reasons for asking the postponement. The first was practical: It would save $700 million. The second was symbolic: It would demonstrate the willingness of a spend-happy government to put its own house in order, and thus to strike a blow against the mounting inflation for which government is so much to blame.

The Senate was interested neither in form nor in substance. One hesitates to question motives. It is possible that all 64 senators who voted for the October raise were motivated solely by considerations of fairness and equity. But it may be observed that fairness and equity, which always are seen with some difficulty, may be perceived with greater clarity six weeks before an election. The raise will benefit 1.5 million civilian employes and 2.1 million members of the armed forces. Most of them have families, and most of them vote. So much for the $700 million.

Have federal employes been treated unfairly? No such charge can be sustained in terms of the rising cost of living. Over the past five years, the cost of living has gone up by 30 per cent. Federal salaries have gone up by 30.5 per cent. This new raise will make it 37.7 per cent since 1969.

The minor bureaucrat who five years ago this month was earning $9,000 got a Christmas raise in 1969 to $9,540. A year later, with a 5.96 per cent raise, he went to $10,109. In January of 1972, with a 5.5 per cent raise, he went to $10,665. In January of 1973, a raise of 5.14 per cent moved him to $11,213. Nine months later, in October of 1973, a further raise of 4.77 per cent boosted his salary to $11,748. With the October 1 raise, he will go to $12,394. The reader who is similarly situated can make his own comparisons.

Salary figures tell only part of the story. The government, which is to say the taxpayers, also provides 32 per cent of base pay in such benefits as retirement, paid vacation, health and hospitalization, sick leave, and the like. The federal employe has what amounts to absolute job security, and the government's retirement program surpasses anything in private industry.

Proponents of the October raise said it was justified on terms of "comparability" and they cited a government study to prove it. The study suggests that on the average, federal salaries are 7 per cent below comparable salaries in industry. The study is a farce. It excludes salaries paid by state and local governments, by non-profit foundations, and by industries employing fewer than 250 persons. Roughly 75 per cent of the labor force, according to an analysis by the General Accounting Office, is excluded from the comparability study.

Milton Friedman, the University of Chicago economist, speaks for many of his colleagues in saying that the government's deficit spending, which has added billions to the money supply in recent years, is the chief cause of the inflation that plagues us. How is such spending to be curbed? Not by voting two-to-one to spend $700 million that reasonably could have been saved.

Where the big memoir money is

WASHINGTON — Kelly Cloman called me up and said, "Hey man, I've just been arrested for breaking and entering and I can get up to 20 years."

Buchwald

"Well," I said indignantly, "that's nothing to brag about."

"What I'm calling about is to ask you what my memoirs are worth."

"Are you crazy?" I asked. "What kind of question is that?"

"Well, I've been reading about all these cats in the Watergate getting anywhere from $100,000 to $2 million for their stories, and that was just a third-rate burglary. Since the D.A. said I committed a first-rate burglary, I figure my story should be worth somewhere between Howard Hunt's and Richard Nixon's."

"I'm sorry, Kelly," I told him, "that is not the way the publishing business works. The value of memoirs is figured on not what was done but WHO did it."

"That doesn't make sense," Kelly said. "From what I could read, everyone involved in Watergate was an amateur. I'm a professional. Shouldn't my memoirs be worth more?"

"I know common sense indicates they should, but there are other things to be considered. For example, what did you break and enter?"

"A furniture store."

"Ah, that was your first mistake. No one wants to read about anyone who broke into a furniture store. Had you broken into the Democratic headquarters at the Watergate — that might have been another story."

"Why would I want to break in there? They've got nothing but old pictures of F.D.R."

"That's not the point. Breaking into the Democratic headquarters is a political crime. A political crime has much more value to publishers than a crime for monetary gain."

"Damn," said Kelly, "I wish I had known that."

"Let me ask you this. What did you do when you got caught?"

"It was midnight, and they had me up against a sofa, so I had no choice but to surrender and confess."

"That was your second mistake," I told him. "Had you tried to cover up the crime by using various agencies of the government, then your story might have had some interest for a publisher."

"What are you talking about?"

"You can't get the money you're talking about for your memoirs unless you can involve higher-ups in the crime you committed. Now if there had been a White House conspiracy to cover up your breaking in of the furniture store, then I could introduce you to a literary agent. Nothing like that happened, did it?"

"I don't think so. 'Course after I got arrested, the White House could of done something on their own without my knowledge."

"It's probably unlikely. I must tell you, Kelly, if you're thinking of making money on your memoirs, you're going to have to get out of street crime and go into white-collar crime. That's where the royalties are.

"Stealing a double bed," I told him, "means nothing to the Book of the Month Club. But if you had tried to steal an election, you'd have everyone fighting over the manuscript."

Kelly said, "What do I have to do to get into this white-collar-crime business?"

"Put on a clean shirt, a tie, a suit, have your hair cut, insert an American Flag in your lapel and start lying to a grand jury."

"I gotcha man," Kelly said. "You get me an agent and a ghost writer and I'll go to Brooks Brothers in the morning."

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

In 1824, Andrew Jackson wrote: "Should the people suffer themselves to be dictated to by designing demagogues, who carry on everything by intrigue and management, they can not expect to see their present happy government perpetuated." The World Almanac notes that in 1825 he wrote: "Demagogues, I am persuaded, have in times past, done more injury to the case of freedom and the rights of man than ever did a military chieftain, and in our country, at least in times of peace, should be more feared."

Opening lead—♦ 10

The professor won the diamond lead with dummy's king and promptly played the king of spades. East showed out.

The student gasped, "Haven't you finally gone wrong?"

"Not at all," replied the Professor." The odds are that if trumps break 3-0, East would hold them. I still have a very good chance to make my contract. If I had played trumps the other way and West showed out I would surely be set."

Then the Professor proceeded to make his contract.

He led a diamond to his ace. If West had ruffed it would have been too bad but West had to follow. Then the Professor led his jack of hearts. East could do nothing better than to rise with the ace and lead the suit back. The Professor won with dummy's king discarding a club from his hand; ruffed dummy's last heart; cashed his ace of trumps; and showed his hand.

He explained: "I am going to play my last high diamond. West's best play will be to discard. Then I will ruff my little diamond and lead a trump. West will have to lead a club or give me a ruff and discard. Either way I will only have to lose one club trick."

Cards retake division lead

St. Louis scores four in the 11th for 13-12 victory over Pittsburgh

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals have played leapfrog again with baseball's Pittsburgh Pirates, this time with Lou Brock in a new role.

"We came in and Brock was really a cheerleader," said Ted Sizemore, who was exhilarated by a 13-12 Cards victory in 11 innings Wednesday night.

"He kept walking down the bench and kept telling everybody "We can score four, we can score four,'" the Cards infielder recalled.

And whether the spell was that cast by Brock's exhortations or that due to Pittsburgh shortcomings, the Cards did just that in overcoming a 12-9 Pirates lead.

Emotions in the Cards' clubhouse exploded as the team, which had also erased a 5-0 deficit, moved half a game ahead of the Pirates in the National League East.

"It was a storybook finish all right," acknowledged Brock more soberly, "but what it was mainly was the difference between two games and none."

Brock's reference was to the loss column as the Cards and Pirates headed for two series each to wrap up their seasons.

St. Louis, with an 83-73 mark, has six games to go. Pittsburgh, which is 82-73, has seven. While the Cards take today off awaiting a weekend series in Chicago, the Pirates open a four-game set in New York.

"This was a big game for both ball clubs," reflected Cards Manager Red Schoendienst. "It has to be a big plus. And the way they lost has to hurt them," he conjectured.

Schoendienst was able to heave a sigh of relief, whereas only moments earlier his team had appeared headed for defeat.

Art Howe's bunt pinch single touched off an 11th inning Pirates burst after the Cards squandered a 9-6 lead.

Willie Stargell bounced a single over first, Manny Sanguillen's single scored pinch-runner Miguel Dilone and Ed Kirkpatrick doubled home two more.

But the Cardinals, who then trailed 12-9, had gained one break by removal of Pirates relief ace Dave Giusti for Howe.

Sizemore greeted rookie reliever Juan Jimenez, the sixth Pirate hurler, with a ringing single and Reggie Smith walked on four pitches.

Ted Simmons, not one to waste time, smacked the next pitch for a double into right-center scoring Sizemore, and then the dam burst.

After 6-foot-6 Jim Minshall, 0-1, spelled Jimenez the Pirates messed up Joe Torre's grounder, with Rennie Stennett throwing past first base, and the score was tied.

Bake McBride's bunt single moved pinch-runner Larry Herndon to third and pinch-hitter Jim Dwyer drove a sacrifice fly to right field for the win.

"People say that a certain game makes or breaks you," Schoendienst suggested in the Cards' clubhouse. "If there's any game that makes or breaks you, this was it."

But in the Pirates' clubhouse an unruffled Manager Danny Murtaugh dissented, noting, "It can't be a make or break ball game if we win four in New York."

Ahead of the 11th the Pirates had swarmed to their 5-0 lead in the opening inning with the aid of a three-run Sanguillen homer and the Cards had retaliated with six runs in the third.

Al Oliver's double forged a 6-6 tie in the fifth only to have St. Louis take its 9-6 lead and afterwood lose a 9-8 edge in the ninth via an error.

"This was the best game I've ever seen or played in," Oliver said philosophically. "In New York we're going to face some awfully tough pitching."

A.P. favors Arizona St. by three over Missouri

NEW YORK (AP) — Any resemblance between this week's Top Ten and last week's is purely coincidental. So is any resemblance between this week's forecasting average and last week's.

The rash of upsets that invaded the Top Ten also played havoc with the prognosticating last week.

Secure in the knowledge that it can hardly get any worse, here goes:

Texas 28, Texas Tech 21: Texas was the only team to beat Tech last year and this one will be for blood.

Arizona State 24, Missouri 21: Mizzou's Al Onofrio played at Arizona State and used to be an assistant coach there and he's still helping the Sun Devils ... to a better season.

Southern California 31, Pitt 21: 31-21 A.D. That's Anthony Davis against Anthony Dorsett. The Pitt Panther will have come all the way back if it wins this one.

Texas A&M 28, Washington 7: Would you believe Washington is the only unbeaten-untied team in the Pac-8? Not for long.

Auburn 14, Tennessee 13: Despite last year's 21-0 whipping of Auburn, Tennessee usually has trouble with teams from Alabama.

Ohio State 49, Southern Methodist 14: Ohio State has the horses ... and a couple of Griffins.

Notre Dame 35, Purdue 10: Irish want that No. 1 spot.

Oklahoma 35, Utah State 10: So do the Sooners.

Alabama 35, Vanderbilt 10: So does the Crimson Tide.

Michigan 28, Navy 7: Last week, Navy beat Penn State for the first time since 1967. That was also the last year Navy beat Michigan. Don't bet on lightning striking twice, even though Michigan struggled to win 14-0 last year.

Nebraska 44, Northwestern 0: Cornhuskers make the Wildcats pay for last week's loss to Wisconsin.

Colorado 21, Wisconsin 14: Upset Special of the Week. Buffs make their home debut a win for new coach Bill Mallory.

Baylor 21, Oklahoma State 14: Second Upset Special. Arkansas upset Southern Cal, Oklahoma State upset Arkansas. Get it?

Illinois 27, Washington State 14: Illini look like the real thing this year.

Temple 21, Boston College 17: Third Upset Special. Temple has memories of last year's 45-0 setback, the only game the Owls lost.

Princeton 20, Rutgers 10: Another episode between college football's original rivals.

Florida 21, Mississippi State 14: State's bubble bursts.

Maryland 24, North Carolina 14: Terps are 0-2 but this is their Atlantic Coast Conference opener ... and they're the preseason favorites.

Tulane 27, West Virginia 20: The Green Wave is anything but green.

UCLA 30, Michigan State 21: UCLA's winless and State's unbeaten ... but looking ahead to Notre Dame and Michigan.

Pick Los Angeles Rams to stop Patriots' surge

By BEN THOMAS
AP Sports Writer

The moment of truth arrives this weekend in the National Football League for the upstart New England Patriots.

The Patriots — one of the five unbeaten and untied teams after only two weekends of the 1974 season — will find out Sunday that although this may be the Year of the Tiger for the Chinese, it is the Year of the Ram in the NFL.

To set the record straight, the old Pro Pigskin Picker was NOT 8-5 the first week. Not only did he not pick well, he did not count his losses correctly. It should have been 7-6. This means, that with last weekend's dismal 7-5-1 showing, the season mark is now 14-11-1 for .560. 'Nuff said.

Los Angeles (2-0) at New England (2-0): The Ram defenders dumped New Orleans' Archie Manning five times last week. They may not get to the Patriots' Jim Plunkett quite so often, but they will ... RAMS 27, PATRIOTS 18.

Cleveland (1-1) at St. Louis (2-0): And Cleveland Coach Nick Skorich says that St. Louis "seems to have put it all together." So why argue ... CARDINALS 21, BROWNS 18.

Chicago (1-1) at Minnesota (2-0): The Vikings are one of the few teams that haven't gone sour for oddsmakers and Pro Pigskin Pickers yet this season ... VIKINGS 24, BEARS 10.

Oakland (1-1) at Pittsburgh (1-0-1): The oddsmakers like the Steelers by 10 points. So do we, but not that much ... STEELERS 24, RAIDERS 21.

Cincinnati (1-1) at San Francisco (2-0): These two teams have never clashed before, not even in exhibition games. When the first meeting is over, San Francisco will wish that Pete Rozelle had waited longer before making the introduction ... BENGALS 21, 49ERS 17.

Miami (1-1) at San Diego (1-1): The Dolphins are going to be like Big Bad Leroy Brown until they forget what happened on the opening weekend of the season ... DOLPHINS 31, CHARGERS 10.

New York Jets (1-1) at Buffalo (1-1): Even if O.J. still isn't at full speed, the Bills should handle Broadway Joe and Co. handily ... BILLS 24, JETS 14.

Kansas City (1-1) at Houston (1-1): Let's call for an upset of minor proportions ... OILERS 21, CHIEFS 17.

New York Giants (0-2) at Dallas (1-1): Dallas is home on the range this week, and discouraging words aren't said there. So ... COWBOYS 27, GIANTS 13.

Baltimore (0-2) at Philadelphia (1-1): The season isn't yet wacky enough for the Colts to stage an upset ... EAGLES 17, COLTS 7.

Detroit (0-2) at Green Bay (1-1): Detroit's new coach, Joe Forzano probably will still be looking for his first pro victory after meeting Green Bay ... PACKERS 20, LIONS 14.

Atlanta (0-2) at New Orleans (0-2): The Saints haven't forgotten that 62-7 pasting they got last year from the Falcons. So, in another mild upset ... SAINTS 14, FALCONS 10.

Denver (0-1-1) at Washington (1-1): George Allen and crew won't be caught napping in the Monday night game. So let's say ... REDSKINS 21, BRONCOS 17.

Few Smith-Cotton football fans will disagree that Dane Henningsen had the potential to be one of the best running backs to come out of the school in recent years.

Henningsen, who may have surprised a number of those fans by accepting a small college scholarship to Central Missouri State University, has already made his mark in his freshman year.

It wasn't difficult for high school coaches to build a team around his strong running, but planning for the next season presented quite a problem. He was at Richmond his freshman and sophomore years, at Lebanon his junior season before coming to Sedalia for his final year of prep competition.

As a freshman at CMSU, Henningsen has made it known that he can "cut the mustard," so to speak in the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

He ranks as the league's third-leading rusher with 188 yards on 51 carries, and is tied for the MIAA scoring lead with 18 points (all on touchdowns).

Henningsen's 3.7-yards per carry average is the eighth best in the league of those players who have carried the ball 25 or more times.

The MIAA press book was right when it termed Henningsen as one of the "freshmen to watch."

A Smith-Cotton record was wiped out of the Jefferson City football book after last week's 46-12 pounding the Jays received from Raytown South.

The loss was the worst ever by a Jefferson City team, the worst in the 17-year coaching career of Pete Adkins at Jefferson City and the worst since Sedalia trounced the Jays 39-0 in 1950.

It was also the worst defeat ever dealt Adkins, whose teams have prided themselves in their fundamentally sound football squads.

Mayor Jerry N. Jones has joined with a number of other top Missouri city officials in proclaiming Saturday as Sedalia Hunting and Fishing Day in conjunction with National Hunting and Fishing Day.

The day honors America's hunters and fishermen who have made outstanding contributions to conservation, recreation and the economy.

It's a good thing that Notre Dame isn't an Indiana state-supported university, otherwise, the taxpayers might be up in arms about the number of out of state football players on this year's traveling roster.

Looking over a program last week's Notre Dame-Northwestern game in Evanston, Ill., only three players on the varsity traveling squad are listed from Indiana, two sophomores and a freshman.

The sophomores listed are John Dubenetsky, a defensive back from Hobart, Ind.; and Tom Eastman, a linebacker from Elkhart, Ind.; and freshman place kicker Dave Reeve from Bloomington, Ind.

Oh, the luck of the Irish. Or maybe in this case it's the pick of the Irish.

Certainly Missouri's greatest upset victory in its 83 years of football came in 1972 against Notre Dame. The Irish were 4-0 and ranked number 8 while the Tigers were 2-3 when they met in South Bend.

The Bengals greeted the Irish rudely as they became the first team that year to score a touchdown against Notre Dame in the first half. Running back Leroy Moss bolted 16 yards to give the Tigers their first touchdown. Missouri crossed the goal line two more times in the first half as fullback Don Johnson hammered through the Notre Dame defense for touchdowns. The Tigers had to do it the hard way as they scored all three touchdowns on fourth down.

Place kicker Greg Hill kept the Irish down with three second half field goals.

The Fighting Irish got the ball with two minutes left, but Mike Fink intercepted a Clements' pass and returned it to the Notre Dame 15 to preserve the 30-26 win. © Press Features 1974

Game of shuffle darkens hopes of WFL's creator

NEW YORK (AP) — The World Football League bills itself as "the new game in town."

But which town?

The WFL, whose 12 teams began play 12 weeks ago and soon ran headlong into a mini-scandal involving inflated attendance figures, is suddenly foundering, much to the dismay of league-builder Gary Davidson.

The league is shuttling franchises and owners around like some teams shuttle players in and out of the game.

In quick succession within the last week:

—The Houston Texans, taken over by the league for a while, were moved to Louisiana and renamed the Shreveport Steamer;

—The WFL took over the Jacksonville Sharks and gave the players the first paychecks they've seen in five weeks;

—The Detroit Wheels, rumored earlier this year to be on the way to North Carolina, declared bankruptcy, and —The New York Stars made the move to North Carolina instead, taking up residence in Charlotte with a new nickname to be selected soon.

"I expected there would be switches, but I didn't expect them to happen all at once," said the 39-year-old Davidson, the founder and commissioner of the WFL.

Davidson also created the American Basketball Association and World Hockey Association, whose franchises have likewise undergone numerous shifts and financial upheavals.

But Davidson is expressing optimism — guarded, at best — about his newest creation, saying the Detroit team might fold.

"As it stands right now, without any additional surprises, the league can handle the situation where we are right now. If we have other surprises, we'll have to drop the team."

"I didn't expect anyone to operate in the black," he said. "It would be very unusual for anyone to operate at a profit this first season, or for the first three years." The only team he expects to show a profit this year is the Birmingham Americans.

Detroit, financed by the league the the past two weeks, said in its bankruptcy petition it had liabilities of $2.5 million, $1 million of which reportedly is owed to the league itself.

Davidson personally visited the Jacksonville players Wednesday morning, before their night game against Southern California in Anaheim, passed out game checks and admitted the players are still due pay for previous games.

The league is negotiating with a community group to buy the Sharks and keep it in Jacksonville, "which we think is a good football market," Davidson said.

Boston investor Upton Bell, head of the syndicate that bought the Stars, said Wednesday the Stars are in Charlotte to stay — but both he and Davidson stressed that the WFL wasn't abandoning New York permanently.

"We plan to come back to New York for the 1976 season when Yankee Stadium renovation will be completed," said Davidson.

Miller sets his sights on record

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — Johnny Miller has a mission.

"I want to break the record this week and get it over with," Miller said before setting out today in the first round of the $150,000 Kaiser International Open Golf Tournament.

The record is Jack Nicklaus' single-season money-winning standard of $320,542 set in 1972.

Miller is only $4,159 short of that mark. He could break it by finishing as low as eighth in this 72-hole event on his home course. And if he misses here, he has two more chances, in next week's Sahara Invitational in Las Vegas and in the national team championship in Florida in November.

But that's not Miller's concern.

"I don't want to have it hanging over my head," he said. "I want to get it this week and get it over with. I know what I have to do.

"It's not so much the money, the dollars. That's not really important. It's the record. I'd really like to break the record. That'd really be something."

The tall, slender blond, easily the outstanding player on the tour this year, ranked as a solid favorite for the $30,000 first prize despite the strength of the 156-man field.

It contains seven of the season's top 10 money-winners, 11 men who have won $100,000 for the year and 17 players who have won 1974 tournament titles.

Among the standouts are PGA champion Lee Trevino, such multiple-winners as Dave Stockton, Hubert Green and Buddy Allin, big, strong J. C. Snead, defending champion Ed Sneed and young stars Jerry Heard, Forrest Fezler, John Mahaffey and Tom Watson.

Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer an Gary Player are not competing and U.S. Open champ Hale Irwin withdrew because of illness in the family.

Okla St. tabbed as third Big 8 team to down Baylor

By PICK M. WRIGHT JR.
Fearless Forecaster

The fearless forecaster showed how fearless he really was last week, going with the favorites and only picking four of seven winners. That isn't to mention the wrath received from my superior who said I never stuck my neck out to pick an upset.

The overall record after two weeks stands at 11-4, not bad; I think me and the Big Eight should do better this week.

The biggest surprise in the conference is Oklahoma State, which stampeded past Wichita State, 59-0, two weeks ago and last week stunned the pride of Arkansas, 26-7.

The Cowboys' questionable defense seems to be alive and well, allowing only one touchdown in two games. And who needs to talk about offensive success except their coach, Jim Stanley.

It seems Stanley was upset that his team had to settle for four field goals and a couple that were missed instead of touchdowns, but beware this week.

The poor Baylor Bears have suffered through Oklahoma and Missouri defeats, not looking all that bad, and now they are meeting the Big Eight's hottest team. O-State 35, Baylor 7.

The Big Eight's most impressive winner the first week turned to sour grapes or sour cream in the dairyland of Wisconsin last week as Nebraska slipped, 21-20.

This week Nebraska will seek its revenge on Northwestern, a team mauled by Notre Dame last week, without the services of Humm. Coach Tim Osborne has picked sophomore Earl Everett as Humm's replacement, barring help from above.

I think the Cornhuskers have too much for the Wildcats or the Purple Haze as some of the more hip call them. The Big Red can't really afford another preseason loss even though they only dropped to number 11.

I'll take Nebraska by 17, about 24-7.

The other Oklahoma at the top of the conference and No. 3 in the nation has had a week to contemplate from its unexpected hard time with Baylor.

This week the Sooners take on Utah State which has very little to offer. While USU is in an improving Western Athletic Conference where anyone can win any week even against Arizona State I don't think they are in Oklahoma's class.

Let's say the Sooner defense gets a shutout about 42-0.

And speaking of Arizona State they will be in Columbia for homecoming against the Tigers, who finally put it together in the second half last week against Baylor.

The Tigers started moving the ball and found a new weapon in unheralded freshman Joe Stewart. Last week the game wasn't as close as the 28-21 score indicated since seven of Baylor's points came on a fluke fumble which didn't hit the ground until a Bear defender ran it over 90 yards for a touchdown.

The Tigers won't forget a 49-35 Fiesta Bowl loss two years ago, and Tiger fans don't like to lose on homecoming. I don't know how to pick this one, but since the boss ordered an upset, what better place could there be one in my eyes. Missouri over Arizona State by three, 17-14.

And after catching it from the Kansas alumna for picking Tennessee over the Jayhawks last week (even though I was right) I don't think Kansas should have trouble against a team that hasn't won in over a season, so KU 34, Florida State 3.

And then there are those poor Buffaloes from Boulder, who have been stung by LSU and Michigan in their tough schedule. This week they get to meet those same high flying Wisconsin Badgers who made more than Nebraska's fans red last week.

It may be the honor of the Big Eight on the line, plus two straight losses, plus bad publicity, plus a first home game for the Buffs and I feel sorry for the Buffs anyway.

I will stick my neck out again and call a repeat of last week's Wisconsin score, 21-20, with Colorado on top this time.

Iowa State lost a squeaker to to Washington last week, but more importantly they had injured starting quarterback Buddy Hardeman. He could play this week, and if he does get into the game, ISU has a chance.

The Cyclone opponent is Brigham Young who is 0-2 this season, but hasn't given up a touchdown. Hawaii beat them with five field goals, 15-13, and Utah State won 9-6 on three field goals.

Sounds like BYU has a tough defense, but if the Cyclones can get any luck in blocking three pointers they should have a chance. Iowa State 16, Brigham Young 9.

And then there is the team that has been struggling with its anything but tough schedule. The University of Pacific comes calling to the third straight Kansas State home game.

K-State has an injured quarterback in Steve Grogan with a pinched nerve who is doubtful for the Saturday contest.

Even though K-State doesn't deserve to be 3-0 after this week I guess I have to go with the Big Eight Conference, but just barely.

I say the Wildcats inch by Pacific 14-13, a disgrace in itself.

Angels 7, Royals 0

Hassler, Pena shutout Royals

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Andy Hassler of the California Angels pondered over his earned run average.

"It's 2.76," Hassler noted after he and Orlando Pena collaborated on a seven-hitter in a 7-0 victory over the Kansas City Royals Wednesday night. "I'm happy about that.

"I was never under 4.0 in my minor league career. This is the fourth time I've been up to the major leagues, and I know I can help this club in the future.

"What's the difference this year? Well, the first three times I was in the major leagues, they told me I had a couple of weeks to prove myself. This time, they handed me a baseball and told me I was going to pitch every fourth day, and that's pretty much the way it's been."

Hassler's victory over the Royals was his sixth against 11 defeats. The Angels scored all the runs he and Pena needed in the third inning on singles by Rudy Meoli and Morris Nettles, a fly ball, Bruce Bochte's run-scoring single and Nettles' steal of home while Bochte was swiping second base simultaneously.

The outburst came against Royals starter Nelson Briles, 5-6. California picked up a single run in the seventh on singles by Lee Stanton, Tom Egan and pinch hitter Winston Llenas.

The Angels broke the game wide open with four more in the ninth with Nettles sending a run home on a single, Bob Heise driving in two with a double and Bochte hitting a single that drove in the fourth run of the inning.

Pena relieved Hassler in the seventh when the Royals threatened.

"I've been sick the last two or three days," Hassler said, "and when they asked me if I was tired, I told them yes. I didn't ask them to take me out."

Hassler said he's had "good command of my fast ball much of the time this season, and I've been able to keep the ball down."

Hassler knocked on wood surrounding his cubicle in the Angels' clubhouse.

"I've had more good days than bad in that respect," he added.

Hassler has allowed only five earned runs in 38 2-3 innings in September. Unearned runs have decided six of his 11 losses.

"I've had a little tough luck this year," Hassler concluded, "but who hasn't on this club?"

Cards' gate 3rd best in history

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals have completed their home National League season with attendance of 1,838,413, third high in the club's history.

A crowd of 41,345 pushed the attendance to the mark Wednesday night, leaving the club third behind the Los Angeles Dodgers and Cincinnati Reds in major league attendance this year.

Only in 1967, when the turnout was a record 2,090,145, and in 1968, when the figure was 2,011,177, have crowds at Busch Stadium exceeded the 1974 total.

American girl handed grid job

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Linda Sprague of Spokane went to Koonung High School in Melbourne, Australia to be an English teacher. She also has become the school's head football coach.

Miss Sprague wrote her parents here that the school added a new sport this year called "gridiron," or American-style football.

The Eastern Washington State College graduate was the only teacher who had seen many gridiron games, so she became the coach.

Her father, Donald Sprague, is sending her, at her urgent request, books on football coaching and strategy.

Ziegler may suit

Bailey to call K-State signals

By The Associated Press

Kansas State Coach Vince Gibson has decided who his quarterback will be for Saturday's football game but Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne still is unsure about his signal caller as Big Eight teams continued preparations for games this weekend.

Gibson said freshman Arthur Bailey will start against the University of Pacific in place or Steve Grogan, who reinjured a pinched nerve in his neck last week against Wichita State.

Grogan may get in the game, Gibson said, but only if the Wildcats had a comfortable margin.

David Humm worked out with the Nebraka squad and Osborne tempered his pleasure with caution.

"He's better than I thought he would be," the coach said. "It looks as though he has some chance of playing." However, he noted a hip pointer, such as suffered by Humm, often will get better quickly then not show improvement for a week or more.

Earl Everett likely will start at quarterback, Osborne said.

Florida State's 13-game losing string worries Kanas Coach Don Fambrough. He said they are a young team and will be all fired up when they take on the Jayhawks.

"These young kids will hit you and come after you with everything they've got," he warned his players.

Oklahoma State Coach Jim Stanley was pleased with the Cowboy workout, calling it "a real good practice.

"The defense worked on recognition of Baylor's offensive plays and the offense worked on blocking various Baylor defenses and taking it in from the 20."

On the other hand, Missouri Coach Al Onofrio was upset with the Tigers' workout, terming it "lousy. Our execution was not any good at all."

Slotback Steve Mally is out for the Arizona State game, but tailback Bill Ziegler, thought lost with a shoulder injury, may still suit up, he said.

Iowa State Coach Earl Bruce is worried about Brigham Young passer, Gary Sheide. "We have to get a better rush on the passer.

"Even though we were fortunate enough to win last year at Provo, Sheide ripped us for 439 yards through the air," he noted.

Colorado worked on its running game in preparation for Wisconsin. With defensive tackle Dennis Cimmino leaving the team and starter Jeff Turcotte out for the contest, Coach Bill Mallory moved Tom Likovich to left tackle and junior Bob Simpson to right tackle.

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer announced sophomore Anthony Bryant will start at right tackle against Utah State. LeRoy Selmon moved from right to left tackle and his brother, Dewey, will get his first start at noseguard.

Who to replace Chou?

By LONDON ECONOMIST NEWS SERVICE

LONDON — The irreplaceable Chou En-lai, the world's longest-serving prime minister and China's longest-serving politburo member, looks on his way to being replaced at last.

His wife, who is herself a veteran Communist official, told a Nigerian delegation in Peking last week that Chou had effectively resigned after suffering a second heart attack. He is not now expected to resume his normal punishing schedule ever again.

The timing of Chou's illness is unfortunate for sentimental reasons — the Communists' 25 years in power in China on Oct. 1 would not be the same without him — and also for very practical ones. The Chinese plainly would have liked to get some unfisnished bureaucratic business out of the way before the anniversary; a new draft state constitution has yet to be approved and some high officials, including the head of state and the defense minister, have yet to be appointed.

The prescribed way of dealing with these matters is at a full-dress meeting of the National People's Congress, China's nearest equivalent to a legislature; but no such meeting has been held for nearly 10 years. The conflicts which have prevented a summoning of the congress since it was first proclaimed to be imminent four years ago seem at least partly to have been resolved.

But Chou's illness removes the one man capable of engineering the inevitable last-minute compromises — and introduces the problem of selecting his successor. All of which makes a congress before Oct. 1 pretty unlikely.

It is a reflection of Chou En-lai's prodigious workload that his job is now being performed by two men. Teng Hsiao-ping and Li Hsiennien, both deputy prime ministers and both Communist party members for nearly 50 years, have been taking turns on the meeting-and-greeting circuit.

Teng, who has received rather more foreign statesmen and made rather more speeches, is generally regarded as the front-runner for Chou's job. But Li is still one step up in the party hierarchy and a strong contender.

Neither may be a match for Chou En-lai, but either would assure China of as smooth a succession as it is likely to get now that the indispensable has to be dispensed with.

Here's some straight talk from Missouri State Bank of Sedalia, and it's about savings!

Q. Why do bank ads say "Substantial Interest Penalty required for early withdrawal"?

A. That means if you have to have your money earlier than you agreed to, we have to charge you a penalty. It's the law.

Q. What about insurance -- and the safety of my savings?

A. Every depositor in Missouri State Bank of Sedalia is insured to $20,000.00 by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, an agency of the United States Government. The term "depositor" refers to the name in which the account is held. A husband could have one account in his own name, his wife could have a second account in her name, and together they could hold a joint account. Each of the three accounts would be insured to the full $20,000.00.

Q. What is "Daily Interest"?

A. "Daily Interest" refers to the compounding of interest on your account every day, day after day. Before you know it, you'll be receiving interest on interest . . . on interest . . . on interest . . . and so on.

Q. Where should I put my money to work . . . and how much will it earn for me?

A. We might be a bit prejudiced, but Missouri State Bank of Sedalia has a long-standing record for paying the maximum interest on savings that the law allows.

For example . . .

FOUR-YEAR CERTIFICATES	CERTIFICATES FOR 2½ YEARS OR MORE...	CERTIFICATES FOR 1 UP TO 2½ YEARS...	CERTIFICATES FOR 90 DAYS TO 1 YEAR...	PASSBOOK SAVINGS...
7.0% PER ANNUM	6.5% PER ANNUM	6.0% PER ANNUM	5.5% PER ANNUM	5.0% PER ANNUM

If Certificate of Deposit is withdrawn during respective time period, interest will be paid at Passbook rate for the period held, less three months. Federal regulations require that any transfer from present certificates prior to maturity will incur a penalty charge.
